

JOHN COURT BUT NOT LEAGUE--HARDING

PARTY SPLIT MAY RESULT IN HARDING TALK

President Determined To Champion World Court Despite Threats

By DAVID LAWRENCE
Copyright, 1923, by the Post Pub. Co.

Washington—The battle inside the administration to persuade President Harding to abandon the world court proposal, or at least to let it slumber is over. The president has listened to the pleas of some of the strongest advisers in the Republican party, some of them in his own cabinet, but has decided to go through with his fight irrespective of the dire predictions of party friction, irrespective of the pessimistic pictures that have been painted to him of ultimate defeat. The president Tuesday answered the critics, those inside the Republican party, those well known to the public, who are personally acquainted with the members of the Associated Press in New York at the Waldorf-Astoria hotel. Mr. Harding appears not merely as a chief executive but as the Associated Press has frequently had presidents to address its annual meeting—but as a fellow editor who is personally acquainted with dozens of the editors and publishers who will be there.

Mr. Harding has felt that it was necessary for him to set at rest once and for all the doubts and misgivings which have been current of late, concerning his attitude on the world court. Some reports have had it that he did not intend to stand by his original position or that when he found out how the party leaders felt he would switch his course.

DETERMINES FOR GOOD
The stories have had the effect of stiffening Mr. Harding's determination. He probably would acknowledge with pride that he has flexibility of viewpoint, but he is determined that every chief executive should keep his mind open to the last—but he will not brook the whispers of a "lack of backbone," which started before the famous soldier hunters bill was passed and which resulted only in a stronger conviction that he ought to veto the measure.

Somewhere in the past, a situation has arisen about the world court. It has been said, for instance, that Mr. Harding sent the proposal to congress several weeks ago because he was under the influence of "pro-leaguers" as the advocates of American entrance into the League of Nations are sometimes called. The president has since let it be known that he did not consult with anybody but his secretary of state, Charles Evans Hughes, and that the first information any pro-leaguers or anyone else got about the world court came from the publication in the press of the letter of transmittal to congress.

But it is the fact that there should be any opposition to what Mr. Harding calls a Republican doctrine, that there should be talk of friction, that he simply announces his intention of fulfilling a campaign promise—this is admittedly a cause of concern. Differences of opinion as to the political effect of Mr. Harding's determination to go through with the world court proposal range from a suggestion of temporary division to an actual split in the party ranks.

One thing will be clear after Tuesday's speech—the president will have committed himself so strongly to the world court proposal that there will be no turning back and all efforts to swing him will be futile. In fact, if the president had not made up his mind to make a speech on the world court Tuesday, he might have been listening for several weeks more to the urgings of the group which opposes his getting into the controversy any further than he has. They have tried to persuade him to treat it as a matter to be reconsidered as secretary of state to be acted upon by congress with freedom from party restraint in much the same way that congress approves or disapproves the recommendation of a cabinet officer.

ADMINISTRATION POLICY
The president, however, feels he must make the world court a part of administration policy. He thinks the country will stand back of him and that he will gain in strength, especially with the independent voters, when they read his argument for the court. The political advice given the president, however, to let the world court issue alone was not altogether based upon the merit of the world membership in a world court, but on what the practical politicians call "circumstances and not theories." The president is in the race for re-nomination—his attorney general deliberately put him there to squelch opposition; to date there has been no pretext for party division. The fear of many of the men who have argued with the president to let the matter subside is that opponents of re-nomination will merely use the world court controversy as a pretext. Mr. Harding thinks these are exaggerated fears and impressions that will later be found to have been without foundation. So he has cleared decks for action—and it is the first real test of Harding analysis versus cautionary politics.

Mc Gillan, Ill In Bed, Again Holds Up Bridge Voting

Manitowoc Man Given $400 In Heart Balm Suit

By Associated Press
Racine—Frank Horschel, Manitowoc, who came here to marry his fiancée, Miss Lucille Gallagher last November and found that she had married a former sweetheart, was awarded $400 damages in his suit for $25,000 against Mrs. Lucille Gallagher Evans in Circuit court Tuesday.

A jury, which had been instructed to find cause for action and determine the amount of damages, was given the case Monday night.

Mc Gillan is reported to be suffering with gastritis at his home and probably will submit to an operation. His failure to attend the meeting last Friday night made the Monday night sitting necessary. Party officers notified each alderman to be present Monday night. It was learned that McGillan was ill just a few minutes before the scheduled time for the meeting.

WORLD SHOWERS
PRAISES ON A. P.
Associated Press President Describes Trip Around The Globe

By Associated Press
New York—A review of his trip around the world prefaced the introduction of President Harding by Frank E. Noyes, president of the Associated Press, at the annual luncheon of that organization.

President Noyes spoke of the remarkable cordiality and hospitality he met everywhere in his journeyings. "I left America feeling very proud of our organization and I came back with an even greater pride," he said. He spoke of the press showers at the Associated Press as the foremost news gathering organization in the world and told of the tributes everywhere to its absolute impartiality and said in conclusion:

"There is one point at which our eager, individual partisan halts. Both collectively and individually the membership of the Associated Press holds in the highest respect the great office of the president of the United States and join in respect and admiration and warm affection for the president personally."

"We are greatly honored that he has come to this city," he said. "We welcome him not only as the honored holder of a great position but also as a fellow newspaperman of whom we are proud."

"I ask you to drink to the health of the President of the United States Warren G. Harding and of the graceful lady of the White House, Mrs. Harding."

UPPER FOX RIVER IN FLOOD DANGER

By Associated Press
Portage, Wis.—The Wisconsin river was nearing flood stage here early Tuesday. The government gauge registers 11.5 feet and the river is rising rapidly. H. B. Wills, government forecaster, predicts 14 feet the flood stage, within 48 hours.

The levee south of the city will be taxed to the utmost and in case of a breach the main channel of the Wisconsin river would connect with the Fox River to the east putting the upper Fox River valley under water. The Wisconsin river has dropped below the danger level at Merrill and Wausau. At Tomahawk, slight damage was caused to the embankments at the new dam of the Wisconsin Valley Improvement company on Spirit river. No other damage was reported.

NEW CHICAGO TREASURER INDICTED ON RUM CHARGE

By Associated Press
Chicago—John A. Cervenka, installed as city treasurer of Chicago a week ago, president of a brewing company; John L. Hoerber, Jr., also a brewer, and Barney Grogan, former saloonkeeper and politician, Tuesday were indicted by the Federal grand jury charging violations of prohibition.

FIRE LOSS IN CHICAGO YARDS NEAR HALF MILLION

By Associated Press
Chicago—Believed under control Tuesday, a fire which destroyed a storehouse of Morris Co. at the stockyards, broke out again early Tuesday and burned another building increasing the estimated damage from $100,000 to between $250,000 and $500,000. The meat house was the former office building of the Morris Co. and one of the landmarks of the stock yards.

RUTHENBERG DEPCTED AS 'RED' LEADER

Second Defendant Is Linked With Prime Movers Of Convention By "K-97"

By Associated Press
St. Joseph, Mich.—William F. Foster of Chicago at whose trial on charges of criminal syndicalism a jury three weeks ago disagreed, and Charles Ruthenberg, of Cleveland, now on trial under a similar charge were linked directly with the leading spirits in the Communist convention of last August by the state's star witness, "K-97" of the department of justice Tuesday.

Francis Morrow, attended the convention as a delegate. He told the jury trying Ruthenberg that on Aug. 20, when two federal men were discovered snooping about the lonely sand hills where the convention was held, Foster departed hurriedly for Chicago and that later Alfred Wagenknecht, of Cleveland, announced to the convention that Foster would send back "Young Communist league members to take up outpost duty and warn the delegates if raiders appeared."

The same night, Morrow said, Charles Erickson and Eugene Brechtold of Chicago arrived and were posted in the hills overlooking the only road to the convention site. On the following day the witness continued, plans were made, under the direction of Ruthenberg and Charles Krumbien to break up the convention and get the delegates away in three groups.

FOUR GIVE TALKS AT ASSESSOR SCHOOL

Oppegard Urges Assessing Of All Property At Full Value

Four assessors of income addressed the assessors school in the courthouse Monday. They were Anton Oppegard, acting assessor of incomes of the Appleton office, J. P. Keating of Oshkosh, J. J. Colligan of Green Bay and Thomas A. Reddin of Manitowoc. About 50 city, village and town assessors from all parts of the county in addition to several county supervisors were present. C. E. Behnke and John P. Gilsdorf, candidates for the vacant office in Appleton, were also present.

Mr. Oppegard urged upon all assessors to assess property up to the full value and gave some reasons for that procedure. Mr. Keating and Mr. Reddin compared the assessments on county lines and showed in what ways the assessments were similar and in what respect greater uniformity was yet to be desired.

Assessors should be thoroughly informed on matters of taxation as well as those on valuation. It was urged by Mr. Colligan. Local assessors, he said, are often blamed for high taxes, over which they have absolutely no control, and it remains for the assessors to explain to the property owners that assessments have nothing to do with high taxes. He also pointed out that the state tax is the smallest item of the tax bill; the major portion of it is going to the support of roads and schools.

MANAGEMENT BY WORKERS, TOPIC

"How Far Can Employees Participate In Management?" is the subject which Daniel Bloomfield of Boston, editor of Industrial Relations, will present at the meeting of Fox River Valley Industrial Relations association in Coaridge hotel Tuesday evening. About 60 employers of the valley have reserved places for the dinner.

Mr. Bloomfield is a man who has had a part in exhaustive industrial surveys and study of systems, management and labor problems and a highly instructive talk is expected to result.

GIVE 'EM BEER; IT MAKES THEM AMERICANS, SAYS SAM

Albany, N. Y.—Give the workman his beer and protection against cheap imported labor, and the unions will compete making him a first class American citizen.

So declared Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, speaking for a state compensation plan before the New York legislature.

Gompers said he favored beer but not the saloon.

Bride, In Cult Quiz, Admits She's Only 13

By Associated Press
St. Joseph, Mich.—Two more disciples of "King Benjamin" Purnell, a bride and groom of last week's wholesale marriages at the Israelite colony of the House of David went before the grand jury Tuesday morning to explain their sudden wedding and tell what, if anything they knew about alleged immorality in the colony.

Vetty Drake Kirkkan, sister of Countess Drake Woodruff who testified Monday and Mrs. Kirkkan's boy husband, Henry, were Tuesday's first witnesses. They testified, according to reports from the grand jury room, that they had married voluntarily and of their own wish, and that since their marriage on Thursday night of last week, they have obeyed the virgin law of the cult, which forbids marital relations between husband and wife.

The girl it was reported denied knowing anything about alleged improper conduct of "King" Benjamin with the virgins who lived with him and "Queen" Mary Purnell at Shiloh, the headquarters of the colony.

Attorney General Andrew Daugherty questioned Vetry for more than an hour, during which time the girl declared she knew nothing about Shiloh, scene of Benjamin's alleged harem revels.

St. Joseph, Mich.—Allegiance's grand jury investigation of charges of immorality at Benjamin Purnell's Israelite colony of the House of David opened on Monday with 14 young brides and 14 boy grooms on hand to explain their sudden decision to be married in two group weddings last week.

The first witness—a girl bride—was on the witness stand before Judge Harry Dingeman of Detroit, the one man grand jury, for more than three hours, undergoing a grueling examination by Attorney General Andrew Daugherty, assistant Attorney General Quay and George Bookwalter, assistant prosecutor of Berrien Co.

The girl, whose age was given in the marriage license at 17 years old, is actually only 13 years old, according to county records. It was reported, among other things, that she had been questioned was a little girl who appeared no older, and beside her a youthful husband who appeared to be not more than 14 or 15 years old at the most.

ADULTS WRONG AGE

Countess Drake, who was married to Earl Woodruff last Saturday, testified that she was 15 years old, although the marriage license gave her age as 17 years old. Michigan laws provide that a girl must be at least 16 years old before she can marry.

Later her husband testified. Both denied that they had been coerced into the marriage.

The spectacle outside the council chamber of the St. Joseph city hall, where the investigation is being held, was unique. In a dimly lighted corridor, three long rows of folding seats borrowed from the council room held the twenty-eight young married people and a half dozen old members of the cult, who guarded their charges closely from reporters and photographers.

DRESSED STYLISLY

The girls, well dressed, with faces powdered and hair neatly arranged in the latest mode, appeared no different than any young group of young girls of high school age.

In marked contrast to the girls, however, was the group of bridegrooms, each sitting beside his wife. They ranged from a boy who appeared not more than 16 years old, to one man who probably is 25 or 30. The bridegrooms all bore beard's ranging from the soft down of adolescence to the square black whiskers of full manhood.

WHO SPONSORED WEDDINGS?

How long it will take to get the testimony of the twenty-eight colony brides and grooms is to find who suggested their sudden weddings, which were celebrated on two successive nights last week after licenses had been obtained outside the regular court hours. The marriages did not become public until forty-eight hours later.

It has been freely charged in recent court hearings that the colony, when threatened with state or federal prosecution, has always married off couples of girls who might be able to tell something about the alleged immorality in "King" Benjamin's home.

BILL ASKING BOUNTY ON MOONSHINERS WITHDRAWN

Madison—Senator Howard Tensdale Tuesday withdrew his bill providing for a bounty on moonshiners and bootleggers.

This measure would have put the dealers in illicit liquor in the class of wolf pups and other predatory animals. It established a maximum bounty on the moonshiner at $25, which is six times the amount allowed for wolf cubs under the existing law, which the Tensdale bill amended. An all-year round season on bootleggers and moonshiners would have been permitted.

FEAR TROUBLE AS TURKS WISH TO QUIT FRANCE

Resumption Of Peace Negotiations Faced With New Difficulties

By Associated Press
Lausanne—Resumption of the peace negotiations between the Turks and the Allies has given rise to the suggestion that Turkey's expressed desire to cast off France as her economic pilot may lead to difficulties that will prove to be an important development of the conference.

Most of the Turkish debt is owed to France, whose nationals also have a preponderance of the economic holdings in the domain now governed from Ankara. The Turks express a desire to shake off French control, but spokesmen of the latter country aver that they are interested only in protecting legitimate French investments in Turkey, to which end they have already made extensive concessions.

Activities of the bands of Turkish irregulars along the borders of Syria, a French mandate, appear to have entered into the situation resulting in the dispatch of General Weygand to Syria.

The troop movements it is believed indicate that Turkey may be seeking to embarrass France in that region and also in the Ruhr.

The first day of the conference passed without mention of concessions.

FATE OF ARMORIES UP TO SENATE NOW

State Aid Withdrawn By Assembly—Vote For Examination Of Chiropractors

By Associated Press
Madison—Whether state armories shall be abolished and army property turned over to local communities for education of civic purposes is now for the senate to decide. The assembly Tuesday passed and sent to the upper house the Polavski bill terminating state aid for armories. The vote on passage was 51 to 30 and came after an unsuccessful attempt by Assemblymen Peterson of Milwaukee to have the measure indefinitely postponed.

The upper senate bill empowering the legislature to remove appointive public officials through adoption of a joint resolution in both houses was sent to third reading, 65 to 22.

HIT SMOKE NUISANCE

The assembly empowered the Schumann senate bill empowering all municipalities to regulate smoke nuisances, after adopting a sub amendment by Assemblyman Schimpf, making the bill more specific in its provisions.

The Miner bill, providing for the examination and licensing of chiropractors by a state board, was passed to engrossment in the assembly Tuesday. There was no opposition or debate.

MUST PASS TESTS

The bill prescribes stringent regulations and qualifications for those who would practice as chiropractors. Their qualifications would include knowledge of physiology, pathology, hygiene and other subjects pertaining to the medical profession.

The board of examiners would be composed of three members, appointed by the governor. Practice of chiropractic without a license would be a misdemeanor, under the provisions of the bill.

VOTE USE OF INHERITANCE TAX FOR EDUCATION FUND

By Associated Press
Madison—The assembly Tuesday engrossed without opposition the Miller bill creating the public education memorial fund from money paid into the state treasury as inheritance taxes. Interest on the fund would be used to support the public school system.

Between $1,500,000 and $2,000,000 annually is now being paid into the state treasury in the form of inheritance taxes. Under the bill, this money would become a permanent fund interest on which would be used to finance the public school system. It is the plan of proponents of the measure to have the fund and interest thereon in time reach such proportions as to take care of the public education expenses of the state. Thus abolishing present taxes for this purpose.

Only Fulfilling Party Pledges, President Says

Harding Is Chief Speaker At Annual Associated Press Meeting

Wants U. S. to Join Court

By Associated Press
New York—Following is the text of President Harding's speech at the annual luncheon of Associated Press members:

"During the closing days of the last congress, I sent to the senate a communication asking its advice and consent to the adherence by the government of the United States to the protocol establishing the international court of justice. Out of this simple, natural, normal proceeding has developed so much of mystery, so much of misunderstanding, so much of the protest and approval, so much of threatened muddying of the political waters, that I welcome the opportunity on so appropriate an occasion to reveal to the American people both the purpose and the motives impelling. Ours is popular government through the agency of political parties and it must be assumed that the course of the successful party which is at the same time a political party, must be fairly chartered by the platform of that party and by the utterances of its candidates when appealing for popular approval. On that assumption it is, I believe, to recall the declarations of the party now in power relating to the promotion of international relationships."

In 1904 the national platform of the Republican party said "we favor the peaceful settlement of international differences by arbitration."

Four years later in the national convention of 1908 the platform adopted a declaration of intent to keep faith with the previous declaration and said:

"The conspicuous contributions of American statesmanship to the cause of international peace so strongly advanced in The Hague conference are occasions for just pride and gratification. * * * We endorse such achievement as the highest duty of a people to perform and proclaim the obligation of further strengthening the bonds of friendship and good will with all the nations of the world."

In 1912 the Republican platform made a very explicit declaration relating to an international court of justice. I quote from the party covenant of faith:

"Together with peaceful and orderly development at home the Republican party earnestly favors all measures for the establishment and preservation of the peace of the world, and for the development of closer relations between the various nations of the earth. It believes most earnestly in a peaceful settlement of international disputes and in the reference of all controversies between nations to an international court of justice."

The next formal and solemn pledge was made in 1916. I quote again:

"The Republican party believes that a firm, consistent and courageous foreign policy, always maintained by Republican presidents in accordance with American traditions is the best as it is the only true way to preserve peace and restore to us our rightful place among nations. We believe in the peaceful settlement of disputes and favor the establishment of a world court for that purpose."

QUESTION WAS ACUTE
In 1920 the question of our foreign relations was very acute. The senate had rejected the Versailles treaty and the League of Nations pact. The convention voiced its approval of the rejection but was unwilling to pledge aloofness from the world. Therefore it said in its platform pronouncement:

"We pledge the coming Republican administration to such agreements with other nations of the world as shall meet the full duty of America to civilization and humanity in accordance with American ideals without surrendering the right of the American people to exercise its judgment and its power in favor of justice and peace."

As a participant in the making of some of these platforms and as the bannerbearer of one campaign, I have a right to believe they speak the party conscience so plainly that it is not easy to misconstrue.

RECALLS HIS SPEECHES
But these two other utterances which it is so easy to recall. I allude to the interpretation of the platform by the candidate of 1920. On August 28, 1920, speaking on the League of Nations, proposal, I said frankly and very frankly and very definitely I did not favor the United States entering the League of Nations. It was declared then that the issue as defined by the candidates "involved the disparity between a world court of justice, supplemented by world association for conference, on the one hand and the council of the league on the other."

President Deplores Lack Of Party Unity In Conduct Of Business

New York—Participation by the United States in the world court as proposed by the administration. President Harding Tuesday declared at the annual luncheon of members of the Associated Press would be "in harmony with platform pledges, candidatorial promises and American aspirations" and would not be an entry into the League of Nations "by the side door, the back door or the cellar door."

"Excessive friends of the league" the president declared "have beclouded the situation by an unwarranted assumption that the proposal is a move toward membership in 'the league, while' he added 'the irreconcilable opponents of the league have also beclouded the question with the assumption that entanglements with Europe would unavoidably follow.'"

"The fear of entanglements" the president dismissed with the blunt declaration that if the senate were to consent to any, his administration would not complete ratification of such a proposal and would thereby prevent it from becoming effective.

RECALLS PLEDGES
Reiterating his conviction that the United States could participate in the world court without assuming the risks which its opponents point out, President Harding reviewed the Republican party platforms since 1904 all of which he pointed out spoke for a world court of arbitration. He added: "I believe in keeping the faith. If political parties do not mean what they say and candidates do not mean what they say then our form of popular government is based on fraud and cannot hope to endure. But the president left no doubt that he has no intention of moving toward the league of nations by his support of the world court."

"In compliance with its pledges," he said, "the administration definitely and decisively put aside all thought of the United States entering the League of Nations. It doesn't propose to enter now by the side door, the back door or the cellar door. I have no unseemly comment to offer on the league. If it is serving the old world hopefully, more power to it. But it is not for us. The senate has so declared, the people have so declared. I believe it will be more decisively stamped with finality."

NO MENACE TO PARTY
Mr. Harding made it plain that he did not consider the world court question paramount to all other national problems and added that neither did he hold it a menace to party unity, evidently having in mind the warning issued by some Republican leaders within the last few weeks.

"It ought not to be classed as party question," he continued "but if any party, repeatedly advocating a world court, is to be rendered by the suggestion of an effort to perform in accordance with its pledges, it needs a new appraisal of its assets."

Sensing one of the principal arguments to be used by opponents of the administration proposal the claim that the United States would be placed at a disadvantage in the selection of judges to the court through the disparity in the national voting power in the league assembly, the president said he frankly recognized this as a "political bugbear." But added that inasmuch as no nation could have more than one judge, it was less of a menace to party unity than applied to the league itself."

Although the question of the world court formed the burden of the president's address, he also bespoke a word for the establishment of a merchant marine, deplored lack of loyalty and the organization of groups or blocs to serve group interest and urged that the primary be made an agent of indisputable party expression rather than a means of party confusion or destruction.

T. B. INFECTED MILK WON'T SELL AT GREENVILLE

Other Towns Also Are Driving Out Danger Of Diseased Cattle

BY W. F. WINSEY

Because the patrons are using whey and skim milk as feed for calves and pigs and are working toward certified-dairy products, the Potts & Woods creamery, the Pease cheese factory, the Peters cheese factory, and the Island cheese factory, town of Greenville, are refusing to accept milk from herds that have not been tested for bovine tuberculosis.

The same thing is true also of the Carl Pils cheese factory, Gopher Hill factory (Leonard Bente), and Oscar Pils cheese factory, town of Ellington.

"Every herd of dairy cattle from the town of Bovina on the highway passing through Ellington, Greenville and the village of Greenville into Clayton, a distance of 15 miles, has been tested for tuberculosis," says Dr. T. L. Knapstein.

DECIDE TO TEST

The doctor also says that 60 dairy men supplying the Paul Peters creamery in the town of Ellington with milk, decided at a meeting last week to have their herds tested for tuberculosis as soon as the state legislature makes an appropriation to cover the cost of cleaning up the balance of the dairy herds of the state. He says also that the A. C. Werth cheese factory on the south county line has a clean list of cattle with the exception of only one herd that has not been examined.

As a matter of practical public information, Dr. Knapstein suggests the slaughtering of reactors to the tuberculin test and a public demonstration in localities in Outagamie-co where dairymen have not had an opportunity to find out what the trouble is with hogs, dairy cows and chickens that are not thriving and paying for their feed.

The doctor has consented to assist the local veterinarian in such demonstration in any locality in the county and in an emergency will see that suitable reactors are provided.

SHOULD SHOW FARMERS

If farmers knew how disease is being carried in skim milk and whey, its spread among both farm animals and poultry, and is cutting off profits in case of virulence, they would lose no time and strain every nerve to protect their own animals and to insure the greatest possible profits to themselves by having their own cattle and those of their neighbors examined, Dr. Knapstein says.

On Wednesday, April 25, a public demonstration of animals afflicted with tuberculosis will be made at Black Creek under the auspices of the county organization of the American Society of Equity by Dr. Huhn, Black Creek veterinarian. If the day is fair and the demonstration is a success, the doubters who resist the demonstration will be belied and become converts to the new dairy doctrine of healthy animals and greater profits, taught in Outagamie-co by the veterinary doctors.

REDUCTION IS MADE IN CABLE FEES TO EUROPE

Cable rates to trans-Atlantic points have been reduced by the Western Union Telegraph company, according to announcement received by W. C. Storch, local manager. The new schedule already is in effect.

The rate to Great Britain and Ireland has been reduced from 21 cents to 20 cents a word. New and lower rates also are in effect to France, Germany, Italy, Switzerland, Austria, Czechoslovakia, Jugoslavia, Poland, Roumania, Spain, Hungary and other countries.

Deferred cablegrams which travel in subordination to full rate traffic, overnight cables and weekend letters are acceptable now at remarkably low word rates. The complete schedule has been submitted to the local manager.

ORGANIZER WILL AID VALLEY C. O. F.

Plans For Anniversary And Summer Activities Made At Menasha Meeting

Provision was made at the semi-annual meeting of Fox River Valley Forester association at Menasha Sunday for representatives of the various courts to assist the state officers in selecting an efficient corps of special organizers for the Fox river valley. The new court plan of organization, including the special organizer, was presented by Gustave Keller of Appleton, high treasurer of the order.

The meeting was held at St. Mary hall and was attended by chief ranger, deputy chief rangers and speakers from Green Bay to Fond du Lac. Appleton was represented by Gustave Keller, John Morgan, valley president, L. Hugo Keller, M. J. Guckenberg, Patrick Feeley and John J. Sherman. The program opened at 10:30 with sectional meetings. Dinner was served at 1 o'clock and the general meeting was held an hour later.

The fortieth anniversary celebration was presented by Leo P. Fox of Chilton, state secretary, and it was decided that every court should arrange an appropriate program for the occasion. The date of the anniversary is Thursday, May 24.

Anniversary membership campaigns were presented by George T. O'Brien of Fond du Lac, chief ranger of Wisconsin and it was determined that every court should secure as large a class as possible and that the initiation should be made part of the anniversary program.

Summer activities were presented by Herbert J. Smith of DePere. The speakers of the various courts were urged to arrange programs for the members and their families particularly in the form of outings. The organization of baseball teams was suggested.

Little Chute was selected as the place for holding the fall meeting.

HOUSING SPACE AT A PREMIUM IN BERLIN

Berlin—Housing conditions are so difficult in Berlin that comparatively few families are able to retain an entire house, or even an entire apartment for themselves. Every section of the city has its housing committee, which makes constant inspection and checks up the space in all buildings. Consequently persons having houses larger than the size of their family justifies under the housing regulations are always seeking lodgers. In case the householder does not find his own lodgers, persons will be sent by the housing committee.

Under the present financial stringency in Germany tenants who will pay well, especially if they will pay in foreign currency, are not unwelcome in many palatial homes.

But the ability of foreigners to acquire accommodations of a superior class has caused much criticism among Germans, and members of the housing committees are constantly under fire. While some persons apparently rent entire apartments, according to an official of one housing committee, they have in fact permission to rent only one or more rooms. But by paying the holder of leases well it has been possible to induce them to go for fixed periods to wintering places where living costs are low, thus leaving the entire house or apartment at the disposal of the sub-lessee for a limited time.

Large houses are being divided up in every possible way to meet with the housing regulations and guarantee privacy to the tenants. Apartments in better buildings in Berlin are so large that it is seldom possible for a family to retain a whole apartment. Consequently there are two families cooking in many kitchens, and the comic papers are full of jokes about the complications arising from the housing regulations.

SCOUT TRAINING CLASS WILL MEET IN KAUKAUNA

The scoutmasters training class will meet at 7:45 Wednesday evening in the county training school at Kaukauna. It will be the second meeting of the class. The following program will be followed:

7:45-7:55, military drill, Rev. P. O. Keicher; 7:55-8:05, troop organization, Rev. R. A. Heron; 8:05-8:30, application of knot tying, H. P. Buck; 8:30-8:45, demonstration by games, H. P. Buck; 8:45-8:55, the scout oath, Rev. C. W. Gross; 8:55-9:15, games, Rev. R. A. Heron; closing, scout oath and laws.

Resolution

WHEREAS, it has pleased Almighty God in his wisdom to take from our midst our friend and fellow-worker, Daniel J. Ryan, for many years a faithful member of this County Board, representing the Town of Buchanan and lately the Village of Combined Locks, serving on many important committees, and as the Chairman of the Board of Supervisors, always zealous for the welfare of the county and unfailing in performance of duty for the sake of the public; therefore

BE IT RESOLVED by the Outagamie County Board of Supervisors that by this resolution we express our sense of loss in his death and tender our condolence to the loved ones in his family circle. And

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the members of his family and that a copy of the said resolution be published in the Kaukauna Times and the Appleton Post-Crescent and let this resolution be entered by the clerk in the records of the proceedings.

Dated this 18th day of April, A. D. 1923.

BIG FARM TRADED FOR CHEESE PLANT

Paul Peters, town of Center, has traded his large cheese factory near Greenville for the Pingle Brothers' stock farm 5 1/2 miles northeast of Seymour. The Pingle brothers will operate the cheese factory, which receives from 35,000 to 40,000 pounds of milk a day during the flush season, but Mr. Peters has not definitely decided whether he will go on the farm.

The cheese factory was valued at $31,000 in the transaction and the farm was valued at $20,000. G. G. Brandt of the Brandt Land Co. made the deal.

The Pingle farm is known as the Henry Pingle homestead and had been in the family since it was cleared. It contains 153 1/2 acres and is stocked with high grade cattle and equipped with modern machinery.

This, the smallest military seaplane ever built, had its first tryout by the navy over Lake Erie the other day—and it worked. It's so small you could stow it away on a submarine. Glenn L. Martin Company developed it.

Speaks to Students

Major Albert Tucker of the federal army reserve corps, who has spent many years in the Philippines, spoke to the high school students in the democracy classes on Monday. Major

Tucker told of the conditions in the country and also took up the subject of the independence of the islands.

Miss Marjorie Sweetman spent the weekend with friends in Chicago.

Will Rebuild

Charles Manntoufel, whose farmhouse on the Dale-rd burned last week, has erected a temporary cottage to tide the family over until a new house has been built. The house that was destroyed by fire was formerly the Frank Spencer home.

Chimney Fire

The entire fire department was summoned out to extinguish a fire on Douglas-st at 5 o'clock Monday evening, but the blaze proved to be only a chimney fire in the home of Charles Brandt. No damage was caused, but several firemen were left on guard while the fire lasted.

WANT PAPERMILL MEN IN NATIONAL C. OF C. POSITIONS

Nominations Will Be Considered By Local Directors At Meeting

Notices of the first regular business meeting Wednesday of the new board of directors of the chamber of commerce have been mailed by the secretary. Several important changes will go into effect Wednesday evening. The meeting will hereafter be held on Wednesday evenings instead of Thursday evenings, and they will begin at 7:30 instead of 6:15.

The directors will be asked to consider the nomination of Felix Pagenstecher, president of the Bryant Paper company of Kalamazoo, Mich., for representative of the Sixth district in the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, and Milton F. Marcuse, president of the Bedford Pulp & Paper company of Richmond, Va., for head of the natural resources protection department. The latter name has been suggested by the paper manufacturers of this region in addition to the national councillor who is J. P. Frank.

A program of work as prepared by the program of work committee and the American City bureau will be presented to the directors Wednesday evening. Harry Sylvester of the Appleton Baseball club has also asked to appear before the board.

An endorsement of the national defense act of 1920 has been asked of the chamber by the army and navy committee of the Chicago Association of the World War in the Officers Reserve corps. It appears that only 50 per cent of the officers have re-entered military service, whereas, it is felt that at least 75 per cent of the officers should take advantage of the opportunity of enlisting in the officers reserves without the necessity of an examination if the enlistment is made before Nov. 11, 1923.

SHERIFF TRACING LOOTERS OF MILLS STORE AT LEEMAN

Cash And Merchandise Are Carted Away From Building During Night

Efforts of Sheriff Otto H. Zuehlke and his deputies to track down the robbers who looted the general merchandise store of Ben Mills at Leeman early Sunday morning have proved fruitless.

It was found that merchandise valued at approximately $200 had been taken from the store and loaded into a wagon nearby. The loot contained about $35 in cash and a large quantity of knives, forks, candy, groceries, neckties and other articles of clothing.

The wagon wheel tracks were traced as far as the Wolf river where the wagon crossed and proceeded in a westward direction. The trail was lost among the tracks of the Sunday morning milk wagons. The robbery was effected while everyone was asleep.

FORMER LAWRENTIAN TO DIRECT WAUSAU ATHLETICS

Wausau—S. B. Tobey, superintendent of the Wausau public schools, today announced that Clyde Ewers, principal of the Marion high school, will be director of athletics at the Wausau high school for the coming year.

Mr. Ewers will have charge of all boys' athletics at the school, succeeding Robert Erickson as coach of the football team and Merton S. Lean as coach of the basketball squad, and also in track and field work. Mr. Lean succeeds Mr. Ewers as principal of the Marion school.

"Cabby," as the new director is familiarly known among Lawrence college graduates and students, was very prominent in football, basketball and track work. During the world war he gave up his studies at Lawrence college to don a uniform, and at the close of the war resumed his work at the college.

He was an end on the Lawrence college football team for several years and every year he was made an end on the state college team.

MUST PROVE WHICH OF TRIO IS SLAYER

Iowa City, Ia.—Defense attorneys are relying on a unique situation to free three members of a family held for slaying a fourth member in Iowa City's strangest murder tangle.

Roy Wertz, former manager of the Johnson County Telephone Company here, is the slain man. Those now under indictment on a charge of killing him are his widow, Mrs. Mima Wertz; their daughter, Beryl, 19, and the daughter's husband, Robert Leeper, 23.

All these three admit having been in the room when the two shots which caused Wertz's death were pumped into his body from the mouth of an automatic pistol.

But who fired the shots?

Here is the background of this unusual case.

Wertz was killed in his home here 10 minutes after the arrival from Cedar Rapids, Ia., of the wife daughter and son-in-law.

They had been ordered out of the Wertz home the day before, according to evidence at the inquest, because of a quarrel growing out of Wertz's antagonism toward his son-in-law.

Leeper, the son-in-law, was arrested. Then the coroner's jury brought in a verdict fixing the killing on Mrs. Wertz, but attempting to exonerate her on grounds of self-defense, though she had made no statement indicating Wertz had attacked her.

The grand jury, after three weeks' investigation and examination of almost 100 witnesses, indicted all three for first degree murder.

had to go without ARCOLA because they waited till Fall

To 5,000 families in 1921 came a real disappointment. There weren't enough ARCOLAs to fill their orders—and they shivered through the winter with stoves or an old-fashioned heating plant.

Three times as many homes are being built this year as in 1921. And we can make only the same number of ARCOLAs as in 1921 because orders for larger Ideal Boilers have already over-taxed our factories.

The popularity of ARCOLA is tremendous. It is the only satisfactory heating plant for the small home. Gives you a genuine American Radiator in every room. Perfect protection for the children against colds and grippe. So economical that it pays for itself in the fuel it saves.

THE GROTESQUE LEGISLATURE

The principal fact about the astounding session of the present legislature is its ignorance and its blind resentment of existing institutions. In a heat of passion and anger it has struck wildly at everything it could lay its hands on. The assembly has been unblushingly socialistic. It has passed bill after bill, generally without even a roll call, that is aimed at property, education, public security. It voted to abolish the national guard because that organization is the safe guard of law and order, and in the background its purposes are neither law nor order. A body of men so minded would vote just as quickly to do away with police forces in cities and sheriffs and their deputies in counties. The vote against the guard was a vote of hatred.

The votes to abolish the State Board of Education, to cripple the College of Agriculture, to put an end to farmers' institutions, were blind thrusts at intelligence, at the "intellectuals," as they are called in Russia. Were any of these proposals given serious consideration? Of course they were not. They were introduced by some radical and acted on with a whoop.

The three bills to increase taxation heavily are each and every one a blind thrust at property, at the successful man in whatever walk of life, at the successful company in whatever business engaged. Not one of them has been worked out with any real knowledge of its effects, its justice, its practicability. The Dahl and Severson bills were trumped up purely to "get" what its authors love to berate as "big business." One of them carried rates that it finally turned out would produce some $5,000,000 dollars more in revenue annually than even its originator dreamed. This shows with how much care and study the bills were drawn.

Governor Blaine comes along and drafts a bill of his own in some three or four weeks time that virtually supersedes the present system of state taxation, a system developed by generations of thought, experience and wisdom. He would on a few weeks' "figuring" with rates and ideas revolutionize the existing system and put in its place something wholly untried, that is on its face a heavy handicap to productive enterprise, carrying tax burdens almost double those in several of the surrounding competitive industrial states and higher than the taxes paid by business in any industrial state in this portion of the country, or in the east for that matter. He is not at all disturbed by the appeals and warnings of men long accustomed to deal with industrial problems, or of men upon whom the state must depend for its prosperity and progress. All that they say is in his opinion the threats and bluffs of mercenaries.

How can we expect sane and just legislation out of such an attitude, out of such an atmosphere as that in which both the governor and the legislature are going about things at Madison? More than a hundred absurd bills, ranging from silly to vicious, have been introduced, and many of them passed by one house or the other without the slightest concern as to their consequences, save as they served to feed the revenge and resentment in which they were conceived. Nobody cared a wit what the effects would be, so long as they hurt somebody or something that had been successful, and that stood for substance. The state of Wisconsin never in all its history has had a legislature with so little mentality, so low a social and political outlook, and with so much animosity and anti-Americanism, as the one that is today making Wisconsin contemptuous in the eyes of the whole nation.

No good legislation can come out of such a body of men. When we consider the possibility of their improving conditions by wiping out the laws made by the able men who have served Wisconsin in her past history, the men who wrote her constitution and wrote into her statutes the constructive legislation that has stood the test of generations, and substituting laws born of prejudice, social hatred and ignorance, the thought itself becomes grotesque.

CONVICT LEASING

The facts which have recently been published to the world about the leasing of convicts in Florida are shocking and revolting. It is strange that a system so brutal and vicious should have survived enlightened public opinion so long. The convict leasing of Florida is a relic of slavery. It has come done to this generation as a substitute, in a small degree, for the southern institution that was wiped out by the Civil war. We have had peonage in one form or another in various sections of the South since the Civil war. It is a form of slavery that is abhorrent to the American sense of justice and morality, and in direct conflict with American institutions as set up by the constitution and the Declaration of Independence. The whippings accompanying this peonage, along with other extreme punishment, are merely an incident of a vile system that has no place in American life.

Peonage and convict leasing are a direct outgrowth of slavery. They reflect habits and demands of the south, over centuries, for cheap labor. In addition to the fact that the methods employed to secure this cheap labor are degrading and inhuman, they are also economically wrong, because they place enslaved labor in competition with free labor.

The murderous whipping which resulted in the death of a convict in Florida, and which has raised a national protest bids fair to culminate in a revulsion of feeling that will sweep peonage out of the South. It is a reform which the outraged justice of the country will insist upon and which the South cannot evade. Moreover, when this relic of medievalism is abolished, the South will benefit from it in many ways. Instead of being a source of strength to the South it has been a source of weakness, for no nation or state or community can prosper and progress when its industrial structure rests on the foundation of labor that is essentially slavery.

TOO BAD FOR CONAN DOYLE

The wisest thing that Sir Arthur Conan Doyle could do would be to bring back Sherlock Holmes. The detective was more trustworthy than spirits ever could be, as the evidence that he produced was substantial, whereas the "tips" that the spirits give him are not even as tangible as a shadow. In fact, a shadow is evidence, while a ruminating spirit is nothing more than an optical illusion or mental delusion.

Stephen H. Horgan, a New York city photographer, makes Sir Arthur feel the loss of Sherlock Holmes. He declares that he can make any of the spirit pictures. Frank Pearsall, another photographer, insists that a picture of a spirit never has been made.

Somehow, one cannot help feeling sorry for a story-writer whose intellect becomes absorbed with spiritism. Sherlock is so much more interesting than Sir Arthur's latest fiction characters that it is impossible to understand how he could part company with the clever detective.

Jumping at conclusions is said to be bad exercise.

A garden is a great convenience for neighbor's chickens.

Sweet peas fade very quickly when put with other flowers, which isn't acting sweet at all.

A highbrow is a man who thinks nine-tenths of the people are below the average.

A bunch of business men in Phoenix, Ariz., have put their heads together to make cement.

A father is a man who thinks the most important step in his life is the baby's first step.

Sing Sing announces none of its prisoners are professional men. Of course, they are amateurs.

Battleship caught two Atlantic reef runners, which is setting a battleship to catch a bottle ship.

Manila is shipping Los Angeles snakes, elephants and humming birds, without mixing them, we hope.

Health Talks

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.

Noted Physician and Author

Dr. Brady will answer all signed letters pertaining to health. Writers' names are never printed. Only inquiries of general interest are answered in this column, but all letters will be answered by mail if written in ink and stamped, self-addressed envelope is enclosed. Requests for diagnosis or treatment of individual cases cannot be considered. Address Dr. William Brady, in care of this paper.

OLD AGE

Before I let loose what I am about to say, may I not warn divers old persons who accuse me of having no respect or veneration for age that they are quite correct? I have no more regard for 80 years than I have for 8, but rather less. And now, in the closet where we store discarded theories, fallacies and notions, and push over the rheumatism, catarrh, nervous breakdown, uric acid, catching cold, change of life, overwork and nerve tonic to make room for the old age bogey, we'll thrust this miserable squealing impostor into the cupboard, lock the door and throw away the key. We have absolutely no use for it in our business of keeping well.

The very idea of old age is detrimental to health. It helps to gnaw at the vitals in some cases before the victim has reached even maturity. Old age is merely a state of mind, a wicked state indeed. It may have been excusable for deluded worldlings of an older day, but we are scientifically enlightened folks nowadays; you have to say more than boo to frighten us.

The number of deaths per hundred thousand population ascribed to "old age" in the registration of the United States in 1920 was 40 per cent less than in 1910. In the cities "old age" proved more than 100 per cent less popular as an explanation for shuffling off; in the rural districts the bogey lost less ground. In 1920, among the $7,745,921 persons living in the portions of the United States where vital statistics are reliably recorded, there were 21,813 persons over 90 years of age; 1,551 of these were 100 years or more according to the census.

Of the eighteen hundred centenarians in the whole country two solemnly declare they did not begin smoking and drinking to excess until they were fully 90 years of age.

There are plenty of people vegetating who are a 100 years old at 75 and a vast army of unhappy wretches with the symptom habit firmly fixed even before the arteries commence to stiffen, countless thousands of women who begin in their blooming thirties to fret about the crisis which never happens and hosts of hygienically and physically unenlightened men under 50 who accept the "Oserization" joke quite seriously. All this is an unwarranted state of mind; age has nothing to do with it.

Rolling a few somersaults each night and morning won't make an old fogey young again, but as test of youthfulness the rolling is as significant as the feel of the arteries.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Grapefruitlike Answer

Your opinion about grapefruit. Our doctor advised me to eat half a grapefruit every morning before breakfast. But some friends tell me it will irritate the coating of my stomach. If so will stop at once regardless of the doctor's instructions. Miss E. J. Answer—Are not doctors' friends? Why did you consult your doctor if your friends are competent to give you medical advice gratuitously?

Passing Of The Delusion Season

Your opinion in regard to cold serum. I have always taken cold easily and have had several attacks of grippe or flu the past winter.—R. C. W. Is it safe to take quinine and then go out? I think after taking it you ought to stay in bed the following day, but I know some people take it and keep going. Am I right?—Mrs. B. G. R. Interested in your articles on respiratory infection. Feel confident that if you can persuade other people to desist from having "colds" I will suffer less from—er, delusions. My pet sinus trouble seems to light up anew whenever I have come in contact with some one who professes to have "just a cold."—C. M.

Answer—The delusion season is on the wane, now that the population is again venturing out into the open air. I know of no serum likely to be of any avail in preventing respiratory infections. In some cases of frequently recurring coryza or alleged "head colds" an autogenous bacterin, that is, a bacterial "vaccine" prepared from the culture the physician takes from the nose and throat, may prove an excellent remedy. Of course this can be given by one else than a physician, hypodermic doses are usually administered at intervals of several days for a dozen times, or more. Quinine is of no benefit in the prevention or treatment of these diseases; one who takes it is quite as safe outdoors as indoors or in bed, if the condition itself does not demand rest in bed.

LOOKING BACKWARD

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO

Tuesday, April 26, 1898

Attorney Gabe Bouck of Oshkosh was in Appleton on business.

Flour went up 20 cents a barrel the day previous and was selling at $5.20 per barrel.

August Hodgekum returned from Rhineland to enlist in the local military company.

John T. Buchanan was to leave in about two weeks for the east on a business trip, and was to return a month later with a bride, Miss Anne Johnson of Springfield, Mass.

The Clio club met the previous evening with Mrs. H. J. Sifer, Altamont.

J. A. Kimberly of Neenah was in New York, where he went to meet Mrs. Kimberly and his daughter, who with W. Z. Stuart were returning home from Genoa.

A Key West dispatch said that a large Spanish vessel was being brought into Key West by the Mangrove. The captured vessel was the Panama, a Spanish auxiliary cruiser.

President McKinley nominated Judge Day secretary of state. He was confirmed by the senate. Capt. George Morley, who has been drilling the Zouave company of St. Joseph society, bade the members goodbye as he was about to leave for the war with Company G.

TEN YEARS AGO

Tuesday, April 22, 1913

George A. Schmidt returned from several days' business trip to Chicago.

The West End Reading club was to be entertained the day following at the home of Mrs. Dudley Pierce.

The Tourist club was entertained the previous evening by Mrs. C. L. Marston and Mrs. Paul V. Cary at the home of Mrs. Marston.

State Superintendent Cary was in Appleton on his way home to Madison from Kaukauna, where he inspected the new county training school.

The date of the formal opening of the Country club was set for Saturday, May 1.

The delinquent tax returned to County Treasurer John Cooper by the various cities, towns and villages amounted to more than $14,000.

Charles Greinke was awarded the contract for dismantling the old opera house block and rearing in its place the handsome new $100,000 First National bank building.

A large delegation of Knights of Pythias left for Green Bay where they were to be entertained by the lodge of that city.

Twenty-one petitions for naturalization papers were recorded by Clerk of the Court A. O. Danahy, and were to be acted upon at the September term of circuit court.

Motherly Quality Must Imbue Material Nations

(Viscountess Astor, M. P., in the World's Work.)

We cannot be material in our domestic life and be spiritual in our national life. We cannot be material in our national life and be idealistic in our international relations. Lust creates the spirit of war; it is incompatible with the spirit of peace. The material man lives and dies. It is the spiritual man who never dies. So with nations. No material nations, however powerful, have ever survived. The peace which the world wants is not the peace which comes from a smashing conquest—that sort of peace is apt to sow the seeds of vengeance. I believe the women can help to bring to the world a real peace—the spiritual peace—the peace which passeth all understanding.

Always remember St. Paul's words: they apply particularly to women: "God hath not given us the spirit of fear, but of power and love and of sound mind." We can only bring this spirit into world politics if we have got them in our hearts. Let us prove to all nations that we are not only talkers, but doers.

I am striving to take into public life what any man gets from his mother and most men get from their wives if they choose wisely—the courage, and the vision, and the clean love of a mother. That quality has done more than anything in the world to make up civilization. Men know that and we women know it too; and we feel that if we can get a little of that into public life, that is our only contribution. That is the only thing we have got. We are not coming just as women. Women are no more use than men. It is what we bring that is going to be useful, and a great many of us think that we have more moral courage sometimes than men. Women know that physical courage is easy enough, but moral courage takes a bit of doing. We feel that we have got moral courage, and we know that we have got a love, and we have got to be unselfish. If we were not unselfish mankind would not be here. That is the mother's contribution to life. We are bound to be unselfish, and we think we have got a great vision. It is that which we ask men to accept. That is all we want to do. We don't want to go into politics because of ourselves. We know that public life, just as much as private life, needs this mothering thought. When men are blundering around, sometimes a woman sees as quick on public things as she does on private. Men think we women talk so much. It is true, we do; but even then we don't tell them half we know.

English Call It Teuton Swindle

(From The London Mail.)

Until a year or two ago it seemed probable to the average Englishman that Germany would try to meet her international and business engagements. For many years before the war Englishmen had been told and believed, that Germans held the same ideas of honesty in matters of business as were held, say, by business men in Great Britain. When the Germans were finally defeated in the field, most of us believed that every German of every class would strain every nerve to save the honor of the fatherland.

On the strength of this belief, and when the mark had dropped to some hundreds to the pound, Englishmen and others bought marks as a gamble.

Innumerable city clerks bought $50 or $100 worth, town and country professional men invested $500 or so, agitators and laboring men in their thousands risked a few pounds, and all over this country, and no doubt abroad, banks were overwhelmed with applications for marks from every class and sex.

Marks proved always available and such demands were met without fuss or publicity. Quite a number of Englishmen believe that Germany has sold marks in England and elsewhere to the value of at least $3,000,000,000.

These paper marks had cost the Germans nothing to produce, but their sale resulted in procuring for them enormous sums of money, that is, credit, in England, the United States and various other parts of the world. It seems reasonable to suppose that this money (carefully camouflaged) is now at the disposal of the German government, through its agents abroad.

Inner Secret Of Actor's Success

(George Arliss, in The Atlantic Monthly.)

We hear of great actors and actresses being so carried away by their parts that they lose themselves entirely. I like to read of that, because I know what it means. I know those wonderful moments of exaltation, which an actor has occasionally, when he ceases to be himself and is entered by the very soul of his character. That happens now and then. But, of course, he doesn't really lose himself. If he did, there is no reason why his emotions should not get into his legs and carry him clear off the stage and into some remote corridor of the theater.

Obviously, he is all the time aware of the limitations imposed upon him by the architecture of the theater. He not only is aware that he must remain within the frame of the stage, but he also knows that, at a certain and prearranged moment, he has to cross right or left or center or up-stage, and that if he doesn't do so he probably mars the performance of some other character equally necessary for the presentation of the play.

In pointing out that good actors do not, or should not, forget the presence of their audiences, and that they do not find it necessary to live their parts during the whole of the waking hours, I trust it will not be assumed that I am attempting to belittle the calling of the actor. I wish only to insist that the best acting is an art which can be attained only by years of study and active work on the stage, combined with a great respect for the conventions. The art of the actor is to learn how not to be real on the stage, without being found out by the audience.

Exclusively Loomed

The makers of Eagle Shirts have been making good shirts for fifty-five years. They design their own patterns, dye their own yarns, loom their own fabrics, exclusively used by them, and give each one a trade-marked name woven in the shirt-label.

It's no wonder that the well-dressed men who know good fabrics want Eagle Shirts. They ask for them by the name of the make and the name of the fabric as well. It's a double identification—a double guarantee.

TWO FLOORS OF GOOD THINGS TO WEAR

Streets Truly Paved With Gold

(From the Cleveland Plain Dealer.)

It is said that dwellers in the Australian cities are seldom surprised when gold is discovered in the streets of prominent country towns. At Gympie, Queensland, the local council for years permitted a large bowlder to remain in the chief thoroughfare. It was a relic of the early pioneering days. Timber getters and teamsters used it as a resting place. Children played around it. One day a tipsy blacksmith dealt it a blow with a sledge hammer. As a result the bowlder split in pieces, revealing rich veins of gold in the seams and crannies.

Many Australian mining towns were built in a hurry. Expensive structures were erected on centrally situated sites while the attention of miners and others was concentrated on the fortunes of outlying reefs and claims.

The haphazard treatment of mine tailings was shown in the case of the immigrant who made bricks for his house from the red clay thrown from nearby workings.

About a year after he built his house the immigrant discovered that the bricks were surreptitiously taken from the outside walls. Hiding one night in his garden, he caught a Chinese in the act of pulling bricks from the growing gap in the wall. The celestial confessed that each brick taken from the house had yielded several pennyweights of gold.

The Question Box

(Any reader can get the answer to any question by writing The Appleton Post-Crescent Information Bureau, Frederick J. Haskin, Director, Washington, D. C. This offer applies strictly to information. The Bureau cannot give advice on legal, medical and financial matters. It does not attempt to settle domestic troubles, nor to undertake exhaustive research on any subject. Write your question plainly and briefly. Give full name and address and enclose two cents in stamps for return postage. All replies are sent direct to the inquirer.)

Q. Do the stars in the flag represent particular states? R. C.

A. The stars are numbered "from left to right, beginning with top row, and are assigned to states in the order that they entered the Union. The last star is for Arizona.

Q. When was it made illegal to bring foreign labor into this country under contract? R. L. L.

A. The Contract Labor Law was passed by Congress on February 26, 1885.

Q. When was the first national convention held? J. T.

A. The first nominating convention that can be called national was held in Baltimore in 1831 by the Antislavery party.

Q. How much corn do we produce in comparison with the rest of the world, and how much do we export? I. M. C.

A. In 1921 the United States produced 80 per cent of the world's corn crop, Argentina ranking next, but producing less than one-tenth as much, her 1921 crop totaling 281,000,000 as against 3,050,000,000 bushels for the United States. Our corn exports for 1922 were valued at $115,997,000.

Q. How long is Halstead street, Chicago? M. W.

A. The Chicago Association of Commerce says that in the City Map Department they found that the length of Halstead street proper is 19.14 miles. On the northern end of the street Halstead street runs along Broadway for 550 feet and from there on Halstead street runs along Clarence Street 5500 feet farther, making the total actual length of Halstead Street from north to south approximately 20 1-2 miles.

Q. Why is Dante's Divine Comedy called a comedy? K. W.

A. The term comedy is sometimes used in this case to portray truth without leaving an unpleasant impression. It sets forth the fact that the poem does not have a tragic ending.

Q. Which is correct, heartrending or heartrendering? M. P.

A. There is no such word as heart-rendering. Heartrending is correct.

Q. Why are both capital and capital derived from the Latin word caput, why are they not spelled alike? S. J. T.

A. While the parent word was undoubtedly caput in both cases, capital is derived from capitulum and capital from capitis.

Q. Who invented lead pencils? H. M.

A. Nicolas Jacques Conte, a French inventor, originated a mixture of graphite and clay that was used for the manufacture of black lead pencils, known as "Crayons Conte." The process was the foundation of all subsequent manufactures of pencils.

Q. Does any part of the earth's surface change its level? J. M.

A. In some parts of the world the land is apparently rising, in others sinking. The northern coast of Norway is rising 5 feet in 100 years. The coast of New Jersey and parts of New England coast are sinking, the rate at Boston being about one foot in 100 years, and on the New Jersey coast two feet.

Q. Why don't apples grow in Florida? N. O. E.

A. The apple is a fruit which demands a rest period. The warm Florida climate does not permit this.

Q. What is the name of the stake driven into the ground to tie stock to? J. W. E.

A. The dictionary says tethering a picket pin, but the usual term applied out West is picket pin.

Q. Which is proper—picnicing or picnicking? L. J. C.

A. Originally the word picnic was spelled "picknick." When an additional syllable is added it is customary to form the final "k" used in the early form.

College To Give Play On May 8th

Dramatic Ability Will Be Put To Test In "Alice-Sit-by-the-Fire"

When the dramatic production class of Lawrence college presents "Alice-Sit-by-the-Fire" under the direction of Prof. F. W. Orr at Lawrence Memorial chapel on May 8, several of J. M. Barry's most fascinating characters will be understandingly portrayed by dramatic students who have studied them earnestly. Miss Laura Sievert will be Alice, that fascinating woman of 40 who is still as gay and temperamental as a child. Miss Sievert has been able to make the part as lively and as full of vitality as Barrie intended it to be and her interpretation of the character will be well worth seeing.

The staid colonel, who loves his wife, Alice, tenderly but who has long since given up an attempt to understand her, will be taken by Karl A. Windesheim. This character is a strong contrast to the impetuous wife and it takes no small degree of ability on the part of the actor to portray the blunt helplessness of the capable army officer in his family circle.

The pair which furnishes the greatest complication in the play are the 17-year old Amy who is worldly wise as a result of frequent theater-going and her friend Geneva, also well versed in life as shown on the stage. Amy's sacrifice of her own good name in order to save that of her mother furnishes many of the laughs of the piece and also much of the pathos. Miss Mathilda Harriman will be Amy and Miss Rosetta Segal, Geneva.

Another typical Barrie character is Steve, really the foil of the story, but around whom the author has built up a lovable personality. This part is played by Everett Hall.

Pearl Felton Leading Lady In Pinafore Opera

Miss Pearl Felton, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. W. C. Felton is the leading lady of "Pinafore" which will be presented at Lawrence Memorial chapel on Friday and Saturday evenings. She will be Josephine the daughter of the captain of the Pinafore.

Josephine is in love with Ralph but cannot marry him because she is a humble seaman and she is the captain's daughter. She does marry him, however, when circumstances reveal the fact that she is the daughter of a humble seaman and that Ralph is really the captain.

Students at the high school have been working hard to make their first comic opera a great success. The proceeds from the presentation will be used to purchase instruments for the school in order that students who are musically inclined may develop their talent even though they may not be able to afford their own instruments. The students have planned on clearing $1,000.

Miss Chandler told of the value of recreation on the physical, moral, intellectual and spiritual life of an individual. She also emphasized its effect upon a whole community and told how one could get the most out of recreation. Her talk was followed by a demonstration of some of the "mixing" games she mentioned, such as "Fish," "How Do You Like Your Neighbor?" and "Poison."

MARRIAGE LICENSES License to marry has been applied for by Raymond P. Lang and May Gerrits of Appleton and by Willard J. Mignon and Irene S. Ballheim, also of Appleton.

CHILD PREACHER IN NEW CRUSADE AGAINST SATAN

Mary Agnes Vitchevstain, 14, Will Work In East When School Closes

Pittsburg.—As the end of the school year draws near, Mary Agnes Vitchevstain, 14-year-old evangelist who took New York, Boston and the whole east by storm in a series of "revivals" last summer, is planning to devote her vacation to a fresh crusade against the devil and his earthly agents.

"Evolution, revolution and devolution are bringing the world to ruin," says Mary Agnes, looking up from her school books in her home here, "and I shall do what I can to combat them."

So the "child preacher" will start this summer's campaign as the principal speaker at the ten-day session of the Silver Grove camp meeting, to be opened opposite Louisville July 8.

The rest of her summer schedule is not yet completely worked out, but Mary Agnes says her travels will take her through California. She will devote all her attention to the west, it is understood.

Mary Agnes has been speaking in public on religious subjects since she was nine years old. Last summer she spoke in New York and created more interest in the metropolis than any Broadway show running.

Going on to Boston she spoke at Tremont Temple where hundreds were turned away after the hall had been packed. On Palm Sunday this year 3000 heard her exhortations at Pott's Theater, largest playhouse in Washington.

But, despite all this Mary Agnes is a normal, healthy girl. She never allows her speaking engagements to interfere with school—she is in the first year at "high." She likes athletic sports, too.

Mary Agnes' day, J. H. Vitchevstain, editor of a labor publication, can't account for his daughter's unusual talent for pulpit oratory.

"There are no clergymen in the family," he says. "And Mary never had any homiletic training."

"But she's shown an evangelistic bent since she was four, when she came down to the newspaper office where I was working and posted up a sign in her own handwriting telling the boys they couldn't smoke in the office any more."

BIRTHS

A son was born April 18 at Maternity hospital to Mr. and Mrs. Harold Gleser, route 4.

WOMAN SICK TWO YEARS

Caused by Troubles Women Often Have—Relieved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Medina, New York.—"I had a great deal of trouble such as women often have, and this affected my nerves. For over two years I suffered this way, then I read in the Buffalo Times about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and have taken it with very good results. I am very much better and feel justified in praising the Vegetable Compound to my friends and neighbors who suffer from anything of the kind."—Mrs. Wm. H. Akins, 311 Erin Road, Medina, N. Y.

Feels Like Girl Sixteen Rochester, N. Y.—"After my twin girls were born I was all run-down. My neighbors thought I was going to die. I saw your advertisement in the paper and bought Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. The first bottle helped me and I kept on taking it. I only weighed ninety pounds when I began taking it, and I have gained in weight and feel like a girl of sixteen. I never can say enough for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. Nellie Dorey, 16 Skuse Park, Rochester, N. Y.

Students, Allowance Low? Then Read This Article

By Associated Press

Moscow.—American college students who frequently complain that their allowances are too small would learn what roughing it in search of an education actually means were they to come to Moscow.

Investigators for the American Relief administration have come across tragic comedy or comic tragedy in every nook and corner of the bare, cold dormitories which the Soviet government provides for Russian youths at the big universities in Moscow and in the provinces. Last September, when the college term opened, there were approximately 50,000 students registered in the higher institutions of Moscow. Approximately 10,000 of these were capable of caring for themselves; another 10,000 were taken care of by the government, but many of the other 30,000 literally had to sleep in the streets because no quarters could be found for them in the overcrowded city.

One member of the committee found the task of relieving needy students almost hopeless because of the indefinite addresses given by the applicants. Peter Popoff, who was given a pair of shoes and was to receive a food package later, informed the committee that he was rather a difficult person to find, because he slept in a different doorway every night. Two young men from the electrical college were perfectly willing to be called upon, they said, but doubted that they could be found in the crowd at the railway station, where they slept.

So much time and energy is spent trying to obtain food and shelter that many of the students find study impossible. They are always on the lookout for odd jobs that will give them a bed, a meal or a few million rubles. Three girls in one of the universities saw four hours a day for a corner to sleep in. After a meal at the student kitchen at 5 o'clock in the evening they attend their first class. Russian universities always ran to night work, for even in the old days the terms "student" and "poor" were synonymous.

Conditions in the universities of Moscow are said to be infinitely worse than those endured by the poorest students before the revolution. Sleeping forty in a room, some with and some without beds, many of these earnest young seekers after the truth about science, philosophy or medicine play balalaikas and sing songs even when they are hungry. Two cheery lads, owning one suit of clothes between them was lucky enough to find a small room by themselves. They arranged their classes so that one could study in bed and study while the other wore the suit to the lectures. Another youngster had three useful possessions, a blanket, a sack of potatoes and a geometry. Wrapped in one, he used another for a pillow while he read the third.

The urge for education is stronger throughout Russia these days, particularly among the sons and daughters of the working classes, than it has ever been before, and registration in the higher schools in some cases has increased more than 200 per cent.

In the old days at the Russian universities there were no dormitories, the students renting rooms and paying for their own board. Now the government is attempting both to feed and house students, and pays them a monthly subsidy, amounting approximately to two dollars in American money. In pre-revolution days, ten dollars a month would keep a Russian student in ragged but happy comfort.

STATE PAVING 27 1/2 MILES OF ROADS

Hirst Sees Big Season Ahead In Construction Of New Highways

By Associated Press.
Madison.—A successful highway construction season is seen by A. R. Hirst, state highway engineer, in his quarterly report. He pointed out that on April 1, contracts for 163 miles of concrete road had been let, in addition to 107 miles carried over from 1922.

"Earlier in the year it was felt that a condition would be rather unfavorable for construction in 1923, but it now appears that the prices will not be much in advance of 1922," he said.

"Contracts for the cement necessary for all concrete paving operations in the state have been made, with the exception of the work in three counties who desired to proceed independent of the state organization.

"The first man in England to wear silk stockings was, it is believed, Henry VIII.

TELEPHONE CHIEFS FROM 28 CITIES AT CONFERENCE HERE

Problems Of Business Are Discussed By Appleton District Force

Telephone managers, chief clerks and chief operators from 28 cities in the Appleton district of the Wisconsin Telephone company arrived in Appleton Tuesday and will remain here Wednesday and Thursday attending conferences on commercial, plant and traffic matters of their exchanges. The commercial conference began Tuesday morning and will continue until Wednesday noon when the plant and traffic conference will open and continue until Thursday evening. Milwaukee officials will be present at the conferences and several will give talks. On Tuesday, P. M. McHenry, general commercial superintendent, and L. Kilham, general plant superintendent, were the speakers. The discussions of the Tuesday conference were led by P. A. Hansen, district commercial agent. On Wednesday afternoon and Thursday, traffic discussions will be led by P. N. Balanger, district traffic supervisor, and plant discussions by C. J. Thomas, district wire chief, and J. Robbins, district foreman. John O'Day, vice president and secretary of the company will be the principal speaker on Wednesday. E. D. Blume, general auditor, will also make a speech, while on Thursday P. E. Chandler, general traffic superintendent, W. D. Hobbs, chief engineer, and J. P. Krizek, vice president and general attorney will speak. The three conferences are under the direction of J. T. Quinn, district manager of the company. Formerly the district conferences were held in Oshkosh, Appleton and Green Bay, but the three day conference in Appleton has been substituted for the other. Luncheons and dinner will be served for the telephone people at Conway hotel Tuesday and Wednesday. There will also be a luncheon Thursday noon.

DAYS OF '98 WILL BE RECOUNTED AT DINNER SATURDAY

Veterans Will Celebrate 25th Anniversary Of Departure For Porto Rico

Members of C. O. Baer Camp, Spanish-American war veterans, have about completed their program for the celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of their departure for war Saturday, April 28. A banquet will be held at 6:30 in the evening at Odd Fellows hall which will be attended by all Spanish-American war veterans in this vicinity. Civil war veterans and members of the 121st Field Artillery band will be guests of honor. Covers will be laid for about 175 persons. The banquet will be followed by talks by members of the different organizations, after which stereopticon pictures will be presented showing views of Company G from the time it left Appleton until its return. The program will conclude with dancing. It was originally intended to hold a picnic at Allota park Sunday, April 30, but the burning of the cottage at that park last week might cause the veterans to change their plans.

MASONIC BIDS NOW DUE FOR OPENING APRIL 30

Because some of the contractors were unable to complete their figures on April 20, the building committee of the Masonic temple has extended the time for calling for them to April 30. Eleven sets of plans were distributed and it is expected that number will have their bids ready by that time.

ENGINEER CONNOR'S SON

By Will Allen Dromgoole

COPYRIGHT BY THE S. S. McCLURE COMPANY. PUBLISHED BY ARRANGEMENT WITH THE LITERARY DIGEST NEWSPAPER SYNDICATE.

SOME lives there are that seem to run in perpetual sunshine and roses. Some are rounded to darker lines, running always beside the deeper abysses of tragedy.

Some there are who live their three score and drop out of existence, and the memory of them, for good or ill, ceases with the telling of the bells that toll their going. And there are some, short little lives, to be sure, but so brimful of sweetness that the sunshine of them lingers in the hearts of those who knew them long after the little lives are ended.

When Jack Connor was promoted to the position of engineer on the Nashville and Chattanooga road, which cuts the state of Tennessee from north to south, he moved his family into the pretty little cottage standing side by side with the crippled Jerry Crane's, on the hill just above the railroad track, in the little village of Antioch. For the engineer was from home most of the time, and Jerry being a cripple, Jack knew, would insure his own wife considerable protection and company in Jerry's wife.

The houses stood side by side, and both doors opened towards the railroad. The village, indeed, was built so—straight down the railroad, for the train was about the biggest thing around Antioch.

Jack Connor's cottage stood on a hill, so near to the track that he could speak to his wife from his engine when she stood in the door, as she usually did, to see No. 6 go by.

The trainmen were pretty well acquainted with the Antioch people in general but there was not one among them, from conductor down, who did not know Jack Connor's son.

"Little Jack," they called him; and the train never whistled for Antioch but they would look out for the little fellow heisted on the woodpile to see his father's engine go by.

He seldom went farther than the woodpile; that was his mother's order; though the brakeman and the "train butcher" would sometimes try to coax him down to the platform with apples and sticks of striped candy. But he would shake his yellow curls and throw them a kiss as the long train pulled out.

Sometimes his mother would take him down to speak to his father, and the little fellow would go almost wild over the big engine, and the glowing furnace, the great bell clanging, a hasty good-by, and the shrill whistle, which more than once he had been permitted to "pull."

"Just naturally takes to the engine," the fireman would often say, "gets that from his pappy."

And Jack did seem to have a natural love for a locomotive. Jerry Crane used to say:

"I can allus tell when the cysars are coming—there's a shapening of Neighbor Connor's door, a clik of the gate, and in a minute a little yellow head top of a big pile of wood; and when I see it I allus say to my wife, 'Mary, the cysars are coming.' And she looks out, not at the railroad track, but at the woodpile, and says she, 'Yes, they are coming, Jerry.'"

SOMETIMES a neighbor would pass and speak to him.

"Any news today, Jack?"

"Father's aboard today, sir," he would answer, or else, "There's a bridge down between here and Chattanooga, sir," or, "No, 6 will be fifteen minutes late today, sir."

He always had something to say, and it was mostly of the trains or the track, engine or wrecks. Anything that concerned the railroad was interesting to Jack.

He had his father's head, the trainmen said, but the neighbors declared he had his mother's sunny, hopeful, helpful nature.

But one day trouble came to her door. Engineer Connor was brought home in a caboose, both legs mashed and an arm gone, while his engine lay in a ruined heap under a broken bridge just beyond the Tennessee river.

Every man had jumped but him—fireman, brakeman, all but Jack.

"Jump, Connor, for your life!" the fireman had called to him when the timbers began to crack; and the man laid his hand upon the throttle and said:

"You forget I'm engineer."

And there he stood until the crows came.

He was not quite dead when the boys found him, and all the time they were working with him he was praying just for life to get home, they heard him whisper, "Just long enough to get home and die with my wife and boy."

His prayer was granted; he reached home and the two he loved best on God's earth. Just before he died he reached for his pocketbook under his pillow and handed it to his wife.

"It's all I've got, Annie," he said. "I wish it was more, wife."

Then he laid his hand on the little head with its crown of yellow curls, pressing his pillow. He seemed to forget the boy was only a baby.

"Jack," he said, "I leave your mother to you. Take care of her, my man."

Then his mind seemed to wander; he was on the engine one moment, the next with his family again.

"The company will do something for you by and by, Jack," he said, "and always that man in time of danger may desert—any man but the engineer. He must stick—stick—stick to his post, Jack."

The hand on the boy's head grew heavy; the little fellow choked back his sobs and laid one hand tenderly on his father's brow. The dying engineer opened his eyes and smiled.

"Stick to the engine and stand by your mother, Jack," he whispered. The hand on the boy's head grew cold, and when they lifted it and laid it back upon the dead man's breast Jack turned to his mother.

THERE was no childish outburst of grief; only an awakening, as it seemed, of the young manhood in him as he opened his arms.

"Here I am, mother," he said, and she understood.

It was then Jack's life began in earnest. The pet name of "Baby Jack" no longer trembled upon his mother's lips. She called him instead "My son," "My boy," or else "twas Mother's man." So is the heart wont to clothe with strength that which it leans upon. She trusted him entirely, and his quick mind recognized it.

The prohibition no longer confined him to the woodpile, but every morning when the whistle sounded, the cottage door would open, the gate click, and a pair of bright stockings flash for a moment in the sunlight as a pair of nimble legs went hurrying down to the platform.

"Piest piest! Fresh pies and cakes!" He had turned peddler. Such a tiny, industrious little peddler as he was; too, and with so many rough-bearded, warm-hearted friends among the trainmen, Jack's business was bound to flourish.

One day the red stockings went dancing down to the platform with unusual speed; so fast, indeed, that the mother, who was following, had scarcely reached the platform when the stockings were dropped from his engine and caught the boy in his arms and tossed him up to the fireman.

"Catch the little engineer, son," he shouted. "I've promised to let him run No. 6 today."

There was a happy little laugh, and then a vision of golden curls at the window.

"Mother, mother! Can you spare me a whole day?"

"The smiled and nodded."

"I'll come back at 5:10"—the wheels began to turn—"and the wood to in, mother"—the train was moving—"and the kindling"—the rattles of the cars drowned his voice—"box full"—how the steam roared. Not one word of what he was saying could reach her now, but he talked on, and when the steam ceased to roar, and the train glided smoothly out, he leaned from the window. "Good-by, mother."

She heard and waved her hand. And then Engineer Robinson pulled him back and at some roasted corks the "train butcher" had sent up for him.

It was a marvelous ride to the boy, who never ceased to wonder at the proud old engine and its magnificent strength. But for all the pleasure and freedom, there was a shadow all day on the boyish face, which neither the good things nor the wonderful stories which Engineer Robinson brought to his entertainment could quite dispel. He would cling up to the engineer's seat, cushion and dropping his cheek into his hand, fall to dreaming while he watched the clouds of the trees flitting by.

Once the train stopped to wait for a delayed freight, and the engineer spoke to the boy, sitting silent at the window.

"Hello, Jack!" he said. "You're not asleep, are you? An engineer can't sleep, sir; remember that. Whatever other folks may do, he's got to keep his eyes open."

JACK'S eyes filled as he looked at his old friend.

"Yes, sir," he said, "that's just what father used to say."

Engineer Robinson turned to look out at the other window, down the track—the straight, treacherous track along which poor Jack Connor had traveled to eternity.

Young Jack talked on, softly but distinctly: "And father said, the night they brought him home, sir, he said: 'Every man may jump but the engineer—the engineer must stick to the engine.' And he said, father said, away off it seemed to me, like you say to speak when the steam's a-sizzling, sir; he said, 'Stick to the engine and stand by your mother, Jack.' And I've been a-thinking, Mr. Robinson."

—the engineer leaned farther out, the sleeve of his blue overalls brushed his face, while Jack talked on. "I've been a-thinking all day as maybe I ought not to have left her by herself a whole day."

The engineer answered without turning his head:

"But you know what father said. 'Stand by your mother, Jack,' and here I am away off on your engine, sir."

The delayed freight rattled by twenty minutes late; the fireman threw in some coal, the steam began to puff, and No. 6 sped on its way.

Th wind, could it have spoken, must have carried strange stories of what it saw and heard in its passage through the engine box that day; strange stories of rough forms and gentle hearts, of gruff voices and tender words, bearded chin and childish cheek pressed together in sympathy and love.

No. 6 drew up on time at Antioch, 5:10. A door flew open as the whistle sounded four times, as if it said, "Here I am, mother."

A little form was lowered from the engine and went flying through the mist and fog towards the lighted door. As the train pulled out Engineer Robinson leaned from his window.

"Here I am, mother," the joyful greeting rang out, and the engineer saw Jack go straight into the arms opened to receive him.

"Here am, mother,"—that became a very familiar cry among the nearest neighbors; and more than once eyes filled up and ran over as little Jack Connor's voice, thrilling and hopeful, rang out on the frosty air of a winter's morning.

One evening he was late returning from a errand upon which his mother had sent him. The clouds were heavy, as if they might hold snow.

Mrs. Connor knew that Jack would be cold and tired when he returned so she took his basket and went out to the woodpile.

"I'll gather the chips," she said, "and save him that much work."

P UT she had scarcely begun her task when Jack came panting up the hill.

"Why, mother," he called, "didn't you know I was coming?"

He expected her to leap upon him; as he grew older the feeling grew, and he was always disappointed if she failed to do so.

One morning she went out to her milking, and a strange dog met her, whining what she did, she threw the milking pail at him and screamed for Jack.

He came with a bound, seizing a club as he passed the woodpile.

"I'm coming, mother." Old Peter Glass, passing near, heard Jack's cry and ran down to see what was the matter. There he stood between his mother and the mad beast, flourishing his club and bidding the dog be gone.

Peter relieved the loyal little fellow by killing the dog, which he afterwards declared to his wife was "raving mad."

"But mad or not," he added, "it wouldn't a-hindered that boy's pitching right in to fight for his mammy. It always brings the tears to my eyes when I come in contact with that manful little chap of Jack Connor's."

Peter Glass was not the only one whose heart softened for Jack Connor's son. Aye, many an eye wept and many a heart beat for him when the little fellow ceased to appear on the hill above the railroad track.

It was June, glad, sunny June, when Jack's mother went one morning to call on a sick friend, an old neighbor, at the station just above Antioch; that he had never seen so fair a day—the sun shone, the birds sang, and the flowers were everywhere.

"You can come to meet me at 15 o'clock, Jack," his mother said, as she kissed his cheek. "I'll be sure to come on that train unless something happens."

"I'll be here, mother," said Jack "to every train until you come."

The sun still shone when the train came in at noon. Jack thought the whistle sounded mournful, somehow. And the engine "slowed up" sooner than usual, so that the train came in "slow and solemn like."

And the telegraph operator had laid his hand in a very gentle way on the boy's head as he hurried past him. And Engineer Robinson never once looked out to speak to him. The fireman, however, turned his face the other way and was busy with his shovel.

The brakeman leaned on his brake and never lifted his eyes as the cars pulled up. Jack thought it all very strange.

"Here I am, mother."

The conductor cleared his throat when the well-known welcome rang through the train. Passengers turned from the windows and put their handkerchiefs to their eyes, as if the sight of an eager face aglow with expectation and delight were painful to them.

"Here I am, Mother." He was scanning every face eagerly, longingly, when the conductor stepped out.

"Jack," he said, "she isn't aboard."

Shadow flitted across the bright countenance. The conductor took the boy's hand in his and held it close.

"Jack," the boy said, "you must be a man. Your mother has not come—will not come. Jack. Your mother is dead, my son."

And the sun still shone, but not for Jack.

He never knew the terrible story, how in stepping from the train her foot slipped and she fell beneath the wheels, which passed over her body. He never knew—from that day he never knew anything, except that she never came back to him.

Day after day when the whistle sounded, a little figure was seen to climb the woodpile—Jerry Crane's woodpile now—to watch for his mother.

"Here I am, mother," the shrill, clear voice would ring out. And when the train had passed on some one would explain: "It's poor Jack Connor come to meet his mother."

They grew accustomed to seeing him there as the days drifted into years. "Every day and night, winter or summer, the trainmen would see the cottage door open, and knew it was Jack waiting for his mother."

One day they missed him; he was ill, raging with fever. Jerry Crane's wife bent over his pillow; the poor little life was going. At 10 o'clock he opened his eyes.

"Is No. 6 in yet?" he asked.

"Not yet, Jack," they told him.

He smiled and closed his eyes again.

"She'll be here on that train," he said. "I must go down to meet her when No. 6 comes in."

At 11 he started and sat up in bed. "Is she in yet?" he asked. "Is No. 6 in?"

"Not yet, Jack dear," they told him, and he dropped back among his pillows, where he lay for an hour talking, first to the engine, then to Engineer Robinson. Then his mind wandered to his father the night he died.

"Stick to your engine and stand by your mother, Jack," they heard him whisper.

At midnight a whistle sounded sharp and shrill, and Jack raised himself in bed and gave a cry of joy: "She's in!" he shouted. "No. 6 is in! Here I am, mother!"

The train pulled up and stopped. It was only a freight stopping for water, but that was no matter to Jack. A smile flitted across his face. "She's come," he said, and with a look of unutterable peace held out his arms and went to meet her.

The next day old Engineer Robinson swung himself clear of his engine and went down the platform to speak to the agent. When he climbed back to his seat at the engine window, he drew his sleeve across his eyes and told the fireman that little Jack Connor had gone to meet his mother.

The coolest and most elaborate set ever constructed for a moving picture is conceded to be the Monte Carlo plaza set built at Universal City, Calif., for the production of "Foolish Wives," the million dollar photodrama coming to the Orpheum theater next Monday for a whole week's showing.

The set is 400 feet long and almost 300 feet wide and includes three full-sized buildings, two circular parks, and many yards of concrete sidewalk and tiled roadways. The Hotel de Paris, at the head of the Plaza, is 100 feet long and 65 feet high. At its left is the Casino 174 feet long and 74 feet high, and on the right side of the plaza is the Cafe de Paris, 120 feet long with its crystal-fronted ground floor and its shining dome, 36 feet in diameter and 50 feet high. Forty-eight plates of glass twelve by four feet, were used for the building.

The biggest item in the construction of this plaza set which is in exact reproduction of the actual plaza at Monte Carlo, was lumber, of which 180,000 board feet were required, at $75 per thousand. Other items were 10,000 square yards of bath, 12,000 pounds of plaster, besides hundreds of palms and semi-tropical plants. Labor alone amounted to $60,000. The total cost of this set, one of the several costly ones constructed for "Foolish Wives," was $150,000.

Even the Monaco trolley cars were reproduced for this set, actually running on regular tracks and carrying passengers.

COUNTY ROAD 'S' DEFINED AS WORST MUDHOLE FOUND

Automobiles And Horse-drawn Rigs Have Difficult Time In "Sinkholes"

BY W. F. WINSEY

The worst piece of road, according to popular opinion, in Outagamie-co at the present time is the half mile of county trunk line S, between the Garvey cheese factory and the farm house of Henry Romanesko, town of Freedom.

It is now a veritable mud trap open to catch unwary drivers whose pleasure or business lures them that way. When they sink in the quicksand and stare at the situation, the air becomes blue about them, and housewives within carshot close the doors and windows of their homes or stuff cotton into the ears of their children. The drivers afterward are timid about going to church and mingling with pious people.

Years ago this piece of road was surveyed, staked out, cleared of timber, and fenced so that afterwards there could be no dispute among oncoming generations over its existence and location. Aside from a few loads of sand dumped here and there from time to time, no improvements have thus far been made. No grading, no draining, no surfacing have been done. The road remains nothing better than a sinkhole of quivering treacherous quicksand.

As the road is the main traveled highway from state trunk line 47 through Freedom to Wrightstown and Green Bay, this neglect is not easy to explain.

A stone quarry is at the west end of the road, a gravel pit nearby and men and teams are subject to call. All that is needed is an order from the proper official to improve the road. Thus far no such order has been forthcoming, it is said.

Some of the drivers that have been stalled on county trunk line S and have proven the adaptability of the English language to such occasions are:

Lawrence Steffen, stalled with horse and buggy. Horse broke shafts and ran home leaving him and his wife seated in the buggy devising substitute methods of travel.

Joseph Horner, Appleton meat man, stalled three hours Thursday. Had to be towed to solid ground.

Jack McCain, stalled two hours Wednesday night. Released and towed to a landing place by William Romanesko.

Eli Valentine, stalled one hour Wednesday night. Finally released by two farmer boys with a team.

Joseph Rickert, stalled 3 hours last week. Horse broke harness and shafts. Had to be towed.

This list might be lengthened indefinitely but it is sufficiently long to show where the worst piece of road in Outagamie-co in general use is located.

It might be added, however, that the writer was stalled three hours on Friday on this same road. He was pulled out of one sinkhole by a truck on better footing. He again was stalled farther on. Seven men who were operating a sawing machine nearby lifted the car bodily from the hole and placed it on higher ground.

EIGHT GERMANS COMING TO FOX RIVER VALLEY

Mayor Henry Reuter, steamship ticket agent, has been advised that eight Germans are on their way to the Fox river valley and will arrive the latter part of the month. Six of the passengers on the steamship "President Fillmore" are destined for Shickston; one on the "Reliance" is going to Menasha and one on the "Mongolia" will go to Dale.

George Lehman, member of the town board of Deer Creek for 17 years, was in Appleton on business on Monday. Mr. Leeman was not re-elected last spring but he expressed his gratitude to his friends in the town who had continued him in office so long.

Among the mourners at a recent funeral in the Isle of Wight was the dead man's pony.

A Free Booklet on the Care of the Teeth

Nothing is more important to the health than proper care of the teeth.

Medical science has discovered that many illnesses such as rheumatism, neuritis, neuralgia, headache, heart trouble, abscesses, skin troubles, boils and nervousness may be caused by decayed teeth.

Therefore each one of us, from childhood on, should know just how to preserve the teeth for the lifetime work before them.

All this knowledge is contained in a booklet on the care of the teeth by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company and offered for free distribution by this Information Bureau.

To obtain this booklet simply fill out and mail the coupon below. Enclose two cents in stamps for return postage. Write your name and address clearly.

Frederic J. Haskin, Director,
The Appleton Post-Crescent
Information Bureau,
Washington, D. C.

I enclose herewith two cents in stamps for return postage on a free copy of the booklet on Care of the Teeth.

ODD FELLOW MOTORCADE PASSES THROUGH CITY

Thirty-five automobiles gaily decorated and loaded with Odd Fellows from Milwaukee and intervening cities passed through Appleton at 6:30 Saturday night on their way to Green Bay to witness work in the first degree which was put on by the Iron Links lodge of Milwaukee. They were joined here by the Appleton delegation.

The motorcade was escorted from the outskirts of Menasha to Little Chute by members of Appleton police force which at that point turned it over to Chief of Police R. H. McCarthy of Kaukauna.

Secretary of State Zimmerman of Madison joined the procession at Appleton and was an occupant of Chief Prins car. The state official sent his car ahead to Kaukauna and expected to use it the remainder of the distance.

STATE LEGION OFFICER IS WORKING IN COUNTY

D. E. Wright, state organizer of the Wisconsin department of the American Legion is spending a few days in Outagamie-co visiting the legion posts. Besides routine legion business, Mr. Wright is urging members of the post to plan to go to the national convention in San Francisco from Oct. 19 to 26.

STANDARD SET OF HIGHWAY SIGNS TO BE USED BY STATE

Shape Of New Markers Will Designate The Warning They Are To Convey

By Associated Press
Madison—The highway commission announces that arrangements have been entered into with all counties of the state for adequate marking and signing of roads this spring. A new series of warning signs, has been adopted and will be in effect, according to the commission report.

Railroad crossing signs will be the present circular sign in general use on highways.

Slow signs will be two feet square with the corners of the sign vertical and horizontal, forming a diamond-shaped marker. This is to be erected at dangerous hills and curves, where highways or bridges are under construction, or at any other place where the driver should slow down for his own protection.

Caution signs will be the same size, two feet square, but constructed with the sides horizontal and vertical, or in other words, erected square. This sign is to be used at road intersections, school houses and other places where the driver of a car is in danger of causing damage to someone else.

Turn signs will be oblong and are

THANKING FARMERS FOR DRAGGING HIGHWAYS

This custom is quite general this spring for the first time and makes it possible for the public generally to make use of the roads much earlier than previous years.

now commonly called "night signs" They will be used at turns only.

State line signs will be erected prior to June at all entrances of state highways to Wisconsin, in order that they may be available for use of all tourists coming into the state during this season.

The report says that warning signs will be erected about one foot outside the shoulder of the road and will be plainly visible by night as well as by day. The shape of the sign, which can be distinguished nearly as far as the sign can be seen, will convey the idea.

Standard markers along highways designating the number of the road will be constructed gradually, the commission says. These will be erected along the shoulder of the road, from cedar posts, projecting about four feet above the ground, the bottom portion painted black and the balance white. Telephone pole markers are to be gradually replaced by the standard signs.

SURVEY OF WATER POWER SITES TO BE OBJECT OF HEARING

Senate And Assembly Also To Conduct Other Conferences This Week

By Associated Press
Madison—The floor assembly bill providing for a comprehensive survey of undeveloped water power sites in the state and making an appropriation of $25,000 to the railroad commission to carry out the work will be the subject of a joint hearing on Wednesday of this week before the senate committee on corporations and the assembly committee on state affairs.

In order to give the state complete freedom of its survey, the bill provides that no permit, charter, franchise or license or any renewal of such shall be given to any person, firm or corporation (municipalities excepted) for the acquisition of water power sites or development of hydraulic power on any stream in the state for a period of six years from passage of the bill. This bill was drafted in contemplation of eventual development of state water power for electrification purposes, according to its proponents.

The Price assembly bill aimed at the Ku Klux Klan, which would make it a crime in itself to commit a crime while masked is also due for a hearing on Wednesday before the judiciary committee. The Blomberg bill creating fire protection districts in the interest of forest fire prevention will be up for consideration by the assembly state affairs committee, Thursday.

The two highway committee bills, assessing a tax on motor fuel and levying a weight fee, which have been reported for passage by that committee, will be given a second committee hearing Wednesday, this time before the joint committee on finance.

The question of free textbooks for public schools, long a pertinent issue in Wisconsin politics, will be threshed out before a joint hearing of the education committees Thursday when the E. H. Johnson bill providing free textbooks will be considered.

The senate judiciary committee will

A Laxative Food that is delicious

YOU never knew before how truly delicious a breakfast of real bran food can be. Post's Bran Flakes with Other Parts of Wheat is altogether new and not a bit like the ordinary bran you may have persuaded yourself to eat in the past.

These new flakes are made by a special process, which retains with the bran other valuable parts of the wheat berry, and are crisp-cooked and appetizing. They contain the nourishing qualities of the wheat, its carbohydrates, proteins and mineral elements, plus "Nature's way" of wheat bran to induce regular habits. They are distinctive in being non-irritating to any part of the digestive tract.

Happily the special process preserves practically the full vitamin content of the wheat.

The Postum Cereal Company studied and experimented for four years to find how to give you this most valuable hygienic factor, bran, in the most palatable and health promoting form.

Post's Bran Flakes is the result of those years of careful study by the Company whose name is synonymous with pure food the world over.

No chokey feeling when you swallow these delicate flakes. You don't have to try to swallow them, either, the way you do ordinary bran products.

Try them with cream or milk as your breakfast cereal tomorrow, and regularly for some days—then note the welcome difference in your regularity.

A generous package for 15 cents

Recipes

Bran Muffins

- 2 eggs
  - 3 tablespoons sugar
  - 1/2 cup flour
  - 1/2 teaspoon salt
  - 1 1/2 teaspoons baking powder
  - 1 1/2 cups Post's Flakes
  - 2 tablespoons butter or other fat
  - 3/4 cup milk
- Beat eggs and add sugar. Sift flour, baking powder and salt together and add Post's Flakes. Add to egg mixture alternately with milk. Mix well. Add melted butter. Put in greased muffin pans and bake in hot oven about 25 minutes. This makes 9 to 12 muffins.

Bran Cookies

- 1/2 cup butter or other fat
  - 1/2 cup sugar
  - 1 egg
  - 1/2 cup flour
  - 1 teaspoon baking powder
  - 1/2 teaspoon salt
  - 1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
  - 1/2 teaspoon clove
  - 1/2 teaspoon allspice
  - 1/2 cup raisins
  - 1/2 cup walnut meats
  - 1 cup Post's Flakes
  - 1/2 cup milk
- Cream butter and sugar. Add beaten egg. Mix well. Sift flour, baking powder, salt and spices together. Add to egg mixture, together with raisins, nuts, Post's Flakes and milk. Mix. Drop from teaspoon on greased tins and bake in moderate oven. This makes 36 cookies.

Corporation Taxation In Other States Compared With Taxation In Wisconsin Under The Tax Bill Proposed By Governor Blaine

THE Post-Crescent presents on this page today two tables showing in a comparative manner the rates provided in the proposed bill, and the taxation of corporations in a number of other states. The following states were selected for comparison: Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Ohio and Pennsylvania. Most of the comparisons are with cities in the surrounding manufacturing states of Indiana, Illinois, Michigan and Ohio, as The Post-Crescent felt that conditions in this section of the country were more likely to be uniform in other respects than in states in distant parts of the country.

The Latest Rates
All of the information in these tables is for 1922, which is the latest tax levy. Information relative to income, franchise and capital stock taxes was secured direct from the state authorities of the several states.

The cities for which rates and taxes are given were selected at random without any knowledge of what their local tax was and the information was secured from city treasurers.

Only two Wisconsin cities are given. Appleton and its neighboring city, Green Bay. Green Bay represents an average tax rate, while Appleton has a rather high rate. The tables therefore will afford a comparison with Wisconsin cities in these two classes as to tax rates.

Two Corporations Taken
For the making of these comparisons two theoretical corporations were taken, one of comparatively small size and another of reasonably large size. For the first table a corporation is used with a capital and surplus of $60,000, real estate assessed at $20,000, personal property assessed at $10,000, and with a net income of $12,000.

For table B a corporation is used with capital and surplus of $500,000, real estate assessed at $150,000, personal property assessed at $100,000, and with a net income of $100,000.

In both cases the net income is based on 20 per cent of the capital and surplus and is taken to represent the earnings of a corporation in normally prosperous years. It must be remembered that this income must be sufficient to tide the company over the usual periods of depression, which all corporations undergo periodically. It must be sufficient to provide for expansions and betterments, in addition to the distribution of dividends to its stockholders.

High Rate Wisconsin City
An analysis of these tables will show that only in those cities outside Wisconsin having an abnormally high local tax rate does the total tax paid by corporations anywhere nearly approach the tax that corporations in Wisconsin will pay under the Blaine proposal, and in no case does it equal the proposed Wisconsin tax.

For instance, take the tax paid by a corporation located in Appleton, where the tax rate is $33.46 per thousand, and compare it with the tax paid by corporations located in Terre Haute, Indiana, where the tax rate is $33.00 per thousand; in Springfield, Illinois, where the tax is $33.20 per thousand; in Kalamazoo, Michigan, where the tax rate is $35.16 per thousand.

In Appleton a corporation in Table B, under the Blaine proposal, would pay a total tax of $43,951.03; in Terre Haute the same corporation would pay $8,250; in Springfield $8,550; in Kalamazoo, $10,540. The largest of these taxes, outside of Wisconsin, is paid in Kalamazoo with a high rate, and yet it is $2,400 less than the tax cited in Appleton.

Half The Tax of Wisconsin
A comparison of the taxes paid in other cities with approximately the same rate as Green Bay shows the following: A corporation located in Green Bay would pay under the Blaine proposal a total tax of $12,086.03. In Indianapolis, with a $24.00 rate, the total tax is $6,000; in South Bend with practically the same rate as Green Bay the total tax is $6,450, or a little more than one-half the tax paid by the Green Bay corporation.

In Detroit, with a rate of $27.20, which is $1.20 higher than Green Bay's rate, the total tax is $8,550, or approximately $3,500 less. In Cleveland, with a rate of $24.90, or $1.10 less than the Green Bay rate, the total is $5,854.50, or less than one-half.

The investigation made by The Post-Crescent shows that in the state of Pennsylvania, where no income tax is levied, there is a franchise or capital stock tax levied against corporations, but manufacturing establishments are specifically exempted from this tax. It appears to be the policy of that state not to tax in unusual ways producing corporations engaged in manufacture.

An Additional Burden
In studying these comparisons the reader should take into account the further important fact that stockholders and officers receiving dividends or salaries from Wisconsin corporations will pay a very high personal tax on such income, whereas in all of the other states shown in the table they would have no income tax whatever to pay.

As a whole, the information gathered by The Post-Crescent as disclosed in these tables is that Indiana, Ohio and Pennsylvania show the lowest taxes paid by corporations, the average for the cities given in these states being approximately one-half the tax that would be paid in Wisconsin under the Blaine bill, or the Severson or Dahl bills, for that matter.

TABLE "A" Figured on Corporations With REAL ESTATE Assessed at $20,000.00; PERSONAL PROPERTY $10,000.00; CAPITAL AND SURPLUS $60,000.00; NET INCOME $12,000.00.

WOMEN TIE MEN AS NOVEL WRITERS; WEST LEADS EAST

Harper Contest Shows How Country Ranks As To Source Of Writings

Are women superseding men as literary leaders in America? Are the big cities more prolific of the coming generation of writers than the small towns and country? Is the literary west forging ahead of the literary east? The answers to these questions, and other interesting inquiries of America's literary trend, are indicated in a census of the contributions to Harper & Brothers' nationwide prize novel contest. The answer to the first question discloses that the aspiring authors and authoresses are exactly even in number—50 per cent of the contributions being by men; 50 per cent by women. This shows a trend, Harper & Brothers say, toward women displacing men as writers. In answer to the second question, big cities seem to foster more writers than the small towns and country—60 per cent of the novels being from the cities.

CITIES IN THE LEAD

Twenty per cent of the women writers admitted they were married; 80 per cent signed themselves "Miss"—which would indicate that married women have less opportunity for "self-expression." Strange to say, of all the girl writers, 70 per cent are from big cities, while of the women, the preponderance, 55 per cent, are from villages. Of the men, 50 per cent are from cities.

In answer to the third question, the literary center of America is still preponderantly east—only 30 per cent of the manuscripts coming from west of the Mississippi. New York state leads all others with 20 per cent of the total number of novels contributed. California is second with 11 per cent. Illinois, which has lately been making noisy claims to being the literary capital of America, trails along in third place with only 7 per cent. Massachusetts is the home of the "best" shows herself to be deteriorating rapidly, managing only fourth place with 4 1/2 per cent and sharing even with the state with Pennsylvania and Minnesota.

HOW STATES RANK

In the order of their literary pre-eminence the other states follow: Oregon, 3 1/2 per cent; District of Columbia and Missouri, 3; New Jersey, Kentucky and Ohio, 2 1/2; Michigan, Mary-

30-HOUR FLIGHT TO HAVANA, AIM OF NAVY FLIERS

By Associated Press Washington—Thirty hours from New York to Havana—two days from New York to Panama.

That is the time set by navy aeronautic authorities as the probable schedule to be maintained by a future all-American airship line connecting North and South America. Demonstration of the practicability of such a Pan-American air service is one of the jobs mapped out for the ZR-1 and ZR-2, monster dirigibles, now nearing completion, the first at Lakehurst, N. J., the second at the Zeppelin plant in Germany. But from New York to Panama would be only one end of the intercontinental service proposed. From Panama the route would extend to Guayaquil, Ecuador to Lima, Peru, and on to Valparaiso, Chile, almost 6000 miles from Broadway.

FIVE DAYS VS. 15

But from Valparaiso to Broadway, for the rich Chilean or Argentinian seeking business or pleasure in the northern metropolis would be a trip of only five days by air-cruiser instead of 15 by steamship. Vice versa, thirsty gentlemen in New York would find the time necessary to reach the oasis of Havana cut in half.

A special Havana-New York service might be found advisable and profitable. It is in such services, as these, Rear Admiral William Moffett and officials of the naval bureau of aeronautics believe, that commercial transportation by airships will find its greatest future.

Between points otherwise accessible only by steamship or by combination of steamship and railroad routes, the airship can greatly reduce the time required. land, Connecticut and Virginia, 2; Texas, Louisiana, Washington, Indiana, Maine, New Hampshire and Tennessee, 1 1/2; Kansas, Arizona, Vermont, West Virginia and Rhode Island, 1. All the rest of the forty-eight states qualified as literary "near hear," less than one-half of one per cent strong.

The winner of the contest will be announced not later than May 1. The judges are: Jesse Lynch Williams, president of the Authors' League of America; Henry Seidel Canby, editor of the Literary Digest; and the New York Evening Post, and Carl Van Doren, literary editor of the "Century Magazine" and author of "The American Novel."

BOASTS HE'LL FLEE BRITISH BASTILE

Arthur Conmy Is Proving Himself The Roy Gardner Of England

BRONNER
NEA Staff Correspondent London—England's slipperiest prisoner, hot after the record of America's "Houdini" convict, has just been transferred to Dartmoor, Britain's strongest fortress, from which no man has escaped in 50 years. But Arthur Conmy is still hopeful. He expects eventually to equal Roy Gardner, his American counterpart, who has succeeded in breaking jail three times. Both men boast of the fact that they never used a gun.

Each has escaped under strangely similar conditions. Conmy was serving time for burglary on the Island of Wight in the English Channel. Gardner was doing a sentence of 25 years for robbing on McNeil's Island in Puget Sound. Both are barren, isolated places.

In Conmy's case, the authorities were sure he couldn't escape to the mainland. All boats and harbors were watched. Systematic combing of the little island was started. Historical women called in night and day with reports that they had seen the prisoner. Conmy was reported to be in 40 places at once.

As a matter of fact, he wasn't far from the prison. He had cast off his convict garb and was found clothed in the garb—

Of a preacher! He was put in irons. But the British papers denounced this. They virtually said:

"It is the business of the prison guards to keep prisoners safely locked up. It is the business of the convict to escape—if he can. It is not fair to punish him because he outwitted the guards."

The irons were removed. Seven weeks later Conmy escaped again. But he was still weak and was caught the same day. Now he has been removed to gloomy Dartmoor, biggest of all English prisons. It stands in the midst of bare moorlands, 15 miles from the nearest town.

Only one convict ever broke away. Two days later he came back almost dead from exposure. Gardner made his first escape while being taken to McNeil's Island for mail robbery. He jumped from a train and eluded arrest for more than a year. Three days after he robbed a second mail car of $120,000 he was re-arrested.

Again he got away by manning his guards and leaping from the train, but was recaptured. Then he escaped from McNeil's after serving only a few months by dashing into a herd of stampeding cattle. After nursing for two weeks a

Tiny Country Is Surrounded By Nations Against Whom She Fought In Great War

CHEMICALS IN DEMAND
By Associated Press London—The chemical industry of England is rapidly developing owing to the restricted output and higher prices charged by her chief competitors, Germany, according to a recent report. The sales of the industry are more than three times the amount reported before the war and almost double that of two years ago. Orders are being received daily from countries which have never before come to England for their chemical supplies. This is particularly true in the case of dyestuffs.

Sofia, Bulgaria—Bulgaria is the loneliest country in the world. Slavia and Roumania, but they have proved lukewarm to her advances. Soviet Russia has been only too eager to offer the little Balkan state its hand of friendship and support, but Bulgaria's rulers know that to accept it would mean a further estrangement from the allies. For more than three years the country has been directed by Alexander Stambulisky, the peasant, who was released from a convict prison in 1918 to quell an army mutiny and overthrow the Czar Ferdinand. He is Bulgaria's strong man, not only by virtue of his own rugged powerful personality, but also because he leads the Agrarian party, which swamps all others in parliament. Stambulisky told King Ferdinand in 1918 that if he thrust Bulgaria into war with the allies, he would lose his head. The king told Stambulisky that he would lose his own head, and threw him in to jail. Bulgaria is a nation of peasants. More than four-fifths of the country's five millions work on the land. The peasants have little sympathy with Bolshevism. They are determined to permit no reactionary movements of the forces of reaction, there are communists in Sofia and other towns, and there are paid Soviet emissaries all over the land. There still are discontented Bulgars who look upon Ferdinand as their rightful King. In the event of a coup by any of these forces, the people have threatened to set up a dictatorship of the peasants.

HONOLULU SCHOOL HAS JIU-JITSU CLASS FOR GIRLS

By Associated Press Honolulu, T. H.—The Japanese high school here has opened a class in Jiu-Jitsu for girls. This step was taken because of the many recent reports of assault upon women and girls in Honolulu, and from the results that are being obtained from the instruction in Jiu-Jitsu art of personal protection. It is believed that the next person who attempts to molest a Japanese girl will meet with a surprise. Graduates from the course are expected to be able to defend themselves against the attacks of much larger persons and to inflict swift counter-punchment. The small stature of the Japanese girls is expected to be no handicap. More than 40 girls are enrolled in the class.

JANET CONTINUES:
So the match started. The first hole was halved in four, and from then onward commenced a struggle which I can hardly think of, even now, without a shiver of excitement. Neither was ever more than two up, but toward the sixteenth hole, I began to realize that another factor besides skill at work. Norman topped his second shot and jumped the bunker and lay upon the green. Michael carried the bunker with a perfectly played mashie shot, but pitched upon a mowing machine and came back to an almost unplayable place in the long grass. He lost the hole. Norman, who was as nearly nervous as I have ever seen him, muttered something about bad luck, but his adversary only shrugged his shoulders. At the seventeenth hole Norman drove fairly well but was still six. It was the old Michael who took his stand afterward on the tee, hard and dogged. I saw his teeth gleam for a moment, and the whitening of the flesh around his knuckles as he gripped his club fiercely. He hit the most wonderful drive I have ever seen, long and low and straight. It carried on and on, while we watched it, breathlessly. Finally it ran onto the green and ended within a couple of club-lengths of the hole. I gave a little gasp of relief, for him the eagles C. n. lief, for from the first I had played that my husband might lose.

But I had reckoned without that unseen force. Norman topped his mashie shot, which bumped along the ground onto the green, passed Michael's ball, and to my horror, dropped into the hole. Even Norman himself seemed to have no words. He stood looking at the spot where his ball had disappeared, his face averted from his opponent.

Michael made no remark. He studied his put and carefully, hit it with a musical little click, and we all watched it run straight for the hole. At the last moment some trifling irregularity of surface seemed to deflect it; it caught the corner of the hole, swung round inside and came out again. It rested on the very edge and we stood there waiting. Nothing, however, happened. Michael turned away, and I fancied I saw a little quiver upon his lips.

At the eighteenth, a strong wind was against them. Norman, pulling a little, escaped the bunker, but Michael, hitting a far better ball, carried them with a few yards to spare. Norman played a fine second and reached the green four or five yards from the hole. When Michael reached his ball, I saw him stop and look at it. His servant gave an exclamation. It was a long time before a ball of earth had been knocked away by some beginner and never replaced, without a blade of grass around it and on a downward slope. I looked across toward my husband.

"It isn't fair," I whispered hoarsely. "Move it with your foot. Norman can't see. Besides I'm in the way."

Michael, who was choosing a club, just glanced up at me for a moment, and I felt as though I had said something scolding. "We don't play games that way," he rejoined quietly. "I am afraid this is going to be rather a forlorn hope, though."

He took a niblick, and against the wind he was only able to get about halfway to the green. This time, however, his ball was lying well. "I play the odd," he murmured as he selected a running-up cleek. We waited breathlessly for the shot. Norman's caddy and Michael's servant, although they had no idea, of course, of the significance of the match, had gathered from our tense air that it was of no ordinary interest. We all watched Michael's ball, when at last he played it, spellbound. It was a low shot, beautifully straight for the flag, and I could scarcely keep back a little cry of joy when I saw it land on the green and run slowly two or three yards past the hole.

"A fine recovery," Norman said thickly. "My turn now to play the like."

He took his putter and my heart sank as I saw him strike the ball well and firmly. For a moment it seemed as though he had holed it and the match was over. It came to a standstill about eighteen inches short.

"This for a half," Michael remarked as he went toward his ball. I saw him half close his eyes as he took up his stance, and I wondered for a moment what he was thinking of. He took the line carefully and struck the ball straight for the back of the hole. I gave a little gasp. It seemed as though the ball were assured. Then a cry of dismay from Michael's caddy startled me. The ball, although it had seemed to hit the back of the hole, spun around and came out again. Again it lay within a foot or so of the hole. Michael stood quite still, looking at it. Norman took out his putter, and I scarcely dared to watch. He was only a few inches from the hole. The result seemed certain.

"This for the match," he said looking across at his opponent. "For the match," Michael repeated hopelessly.

Norman struck the ball with a little stab—and I could scarcely believe my eyes. It missed the hole passing it on the left-hand side and coming to a standstill at least two feet away. Norman looked down at the ground in a puzzled manner.

"This is the rottenest green on the course," he muttered. "Whose play, caddy?"

The caddy considered the matter for a moment and pointed to Michael. This time there was no mistake. The ball went well and truly to the bottom of the hole. Norman again surprised me. He studied his ridiculous little putt with exaggerated care, brushed away some fancied impediment and removed his caddy sharply for talking. When he hit the ball, he hit it crisply enough, but again with that little stab which drew it once more to the wrong side of the hole. There was a little murmur.

"I never say such filthy putting in my life," Norman exclaimed, looking exactly like a normal man who has lost an important match by a moment's carelessness. "Your march Monsieur Benisande. I think perhaps you deserved it. You had all the worst of the luck until my putting paralysis set in."

Michael took off his hat, and I saw great beads of perspiration upon his forehead. "I am thankful for my win," he said quietly, "but I scarcely expected it."

"Janet and I will leave St. Jean de Luz at once," Norman announced. "It will not be necessary," Michael rejoined quickly. "Tomorrow I start for the mountains. I shall be gone for a week or more. I beg that you will not hurry your departure. May I speak to you a moment, Janet?"

Norman made his way, without remark, to the clubhouse. He neither spoke to nor looked toward Michael again. Men are strange beings. This was the passing of the feud which left them both forsworn.

I spared Michael the question which I knew was upon his lips. "Beatrice is well," I told him. "She is still unmarried."

"I am sorry to hear that she is unmarried," he said. "Although I am in the world could be worthy of her. I am going to trust you with a mission. If ever the truth concerning me should come to light, I want her to know this."

He drew from his pocket a letter-case of black silk, with platinum clasps, a simple but very elegant trifling affair. Out of it he drew what appeared to be its sole contents, a crumpled card, upon which was written, in Beatrice's handwriting, he own name. The card was smeared as though with the stain of crushed flowers.

"I planned my death," he continued with a faint return to his old cynical smile. "Very much as I have lived my life—with my tongue in my cheek. Then I read in some French paper that Beatrice had sent flowers to the hospital for my burial, and I felt all the bitter shame of a man who has done an ugly thing. I made what atonement I could. After having reached absolute safety, I risked my life in almost foolhardy fashion. I attended my own funeral. I stole that card and one of the flowers from the grave. If ever she should learn the truth," he added, his face turned away toward the mountains, "I should like her to know that. She may reckon it as atonement."

I laid my hand upon his arm. Speech of any sort seemed to have become extraordinarily difficult.

The last we saw of Michael was, in its way, allegorical. As we climbed one of the grassy slopes of the golf-club on the following morning, we saw two men on the other side of the river, walking steadily away from us along the path which led across the lower chain of hills toward the mountains. They carried knapsacks on their backs and long staves in their hands. They had, somehow, at that distance, the air of pilgrims.

"There goes Benisande on one of his mountain expeditions," the secretary, who was playing with Norman, remarked, pointing them out. "They say that he has made up his mind to climb that farther peak beyond the pass. Even the Pasque guides call him foolhardy."

It watched the two figures. I waved my hand in a futile farewell. But Michael never once turned back.

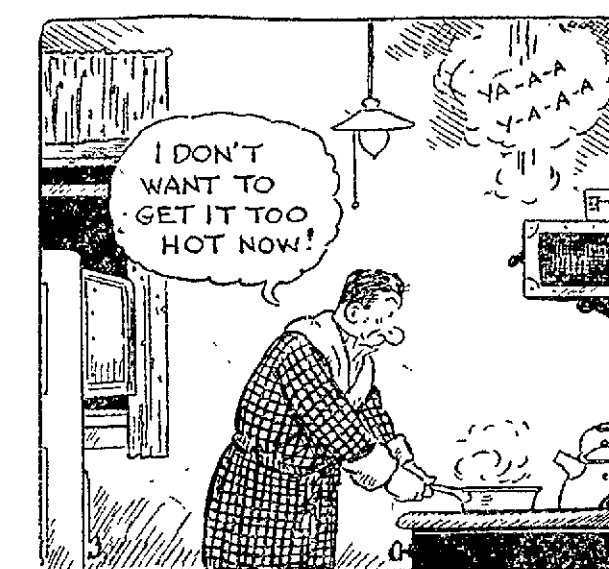

THE END.

Homes Should Have Brushes For Each Need

There are on the market a score or more varieties of brushes for household cleaning purposes. Each of these has its own particular uses, from the kitchen to the attic. House-keepers are more often extravagant through having too few of than too many brushes. No woman has too many brushes when she has a brush exactly suited to every type of cleaning, provided it is used often enough to warrant its purchase.

Brushes are made of either animal or vegetable fiber. The former are generally spoken of as bristle or hair brushes, and the latter as fiber brushes. For use on fine surfaces, where texture, pliability and spring count, bristle brushes are better than fiber. Bristle brushes are, of course, more expensive, but they are more economical in the long run. Animal fibers, or bristles, are generally used in brushes for floors having varnished, waxed or smooth surfaces and for cleaning upholstery and heavy hangings; they are also very desirable as bottle, refrigerator, radiator, bowl and toilet brushes.

For scrubbing and rough uses, vegetable fibers are best. They are more rigid; furthermore they are less affected than animal fibers by alkalis and boiling water. Spiral bristle brushes of various sizes are excellent for cleaning bottles, radiators, the crevices in wicker furniture, bedsprings and numerous other spots that are difficult to reach with cloth and fingers.

When you go to purchase an animal fiber brush, be sure that you get what you ask for. Vegetable fibers are usually rougher and less lustrous than animal fibers. The former burn like a splinter of wood, leaving an ash; burning animal fibers shivel at the end and give off the odor of burning hair. From the May De-linerator.

FASHION HINTS.

EGYPTIAN INFLUENCE

The newest hand bags have sphinx heads, pyramids, lotus flowers and palm trees wrought in colorful beads. For the most part they are flat, pouched shaped affairs or envelope shaped.

NOVELTY STOCKINGS

A novelty in hosiery is the one of glove silk with paisley and oriental designs in brilliant colors completely covering it. Such stockings are worn with black or white pumps and with sports or fancy costumes, but are probably at their best with the pleated white skirt.

NOVELTY CUFFS

Novelty cuffs are seen on many of the street gloves for spring. They are usually developed in two tones, gray and tan, black and white or brown and tan.

PARASOLS

Parasols are lengthening out for the summer and have long, slender handles. The more substantial tops are made of printed linen or pongee, prints, cotton and silk, and batiked fabrics.

DANCE FROCK

A dance frock of yellow tulle with silver lace and ribbons has shoulder straps and girdle of yellow velvet flowers.

BUCKLES

Buckles continue to be an important factor in spring footwear. Frequently they cost much more than the pumps and some are so large they almost conceal the shoe.

Household Suggestions

ARROWROOT

If you will put a little arrowroot in a muslin bag and place it in the water in which you launder your handkerchiefs it will give them a pleasant and agreeable odor after they are ironed.

ALUM HOLDS SHINE

A little alum in the stove polish will give a lasting shine.

LEMON DROPS IN TEA

Serve lemon candy drops in tea for a change instead of lemon and sugar. Add a clove or so, too.

SAVING SPACE

If you wish to economize space in your refrigerator keep your food in glass jars, ranging in size from the two-quart Mason variety to the small jelly tumbler. Plates and flat bowls take up a great deal of space.

USE FOR SOUR MILK

Don't throw away sour milk. Use it for sweet, light bread, tea cakes, pastry and griddle cakes.

SIMPLICITY MAKES ATTRACTIVENESS

Three little maids from school were never dressed more simply than these young women in their new spring frocks.

Disdaining gewgaws of trimming they pride themselves on their old sleeves, smart blouses, full skirts and ostentatious lack of adornment.

Wool crepe, wool jersey, flat crepe and Canton are the preferred materials for such simple street and afternoon dresses as these. Sometimes the plain fabric is combined with printed Paisley, Persian or Egyptian silks.

LETTER FROM SYDNEY CARTON TO JOHN ALDEN PRESCOTT

Nothing done, old man, at least, nothing doing up to date as far as the letters are concerned.

I could see that it would do no good even to mention them when I took Mademoiselle out to dinner the other night. She seemed to have forgotten there was such a thing as a love letter in all the world.

We talked you over pretty thoroughly. The lady acknowledged she wished you well; had nothing against you; that for at least a year you had given her a very beautiful time and she hoped that your wife was worthy of you.

Don't sneer, I think she meant it. She is a very clever girl, Jack. I almost succumbed to her charms myself.

Her conversation, which is a mixture of English when she tries to be calm and French when her emotions become impulsive, is most fascinating.

Honestly, I do not think Paula Perier will give up those letters. However, I should not worry much about them for if she remains in this frame of mind she will never make you any trouble.

She may use them as a lever to pry you away from your wife occasionally, but the time may come when you will want a good excuse. Of course I understand your predicament old chap. It isn't particularly pleasant, and I am sure you are wishing a thousand times that there were no letters of yours floating around to be brought up against you.

I will stay here for a couple of days longer. Mademoiselle and I are going on a long motor ride this afternoon and dine at some quiet inn. Perhaps the Fates will be propitious. If so, I will bring your love missives when I come in a few days.

LETTER FROM JOHN ALDEN PRESCOTT TO SYDNEY CARTON

So that little vixen has put it over you. I might have known that she would wrap an impressionable old bachelor like you about her little finger.

If you are not successful in getting these letters tonight, write me and I shall receive a very urgent call from my firm to return to Albany, and to go and see the lady myself. I will get them if I have to choke them out of her.

Syd, I never will rest a moment comfortably, while she has them. You don't know Paula Perier. She can be the sweetest thing in all the world and she can be a hell-cat. At one time I thought she was rather fascinating as the hell-cat, but now her claws are out of the velvet and seem quite formidable.

Oh, Syd, I have not done anything bad enough to lose the chance of being loved by the sweetest girl on earth, but I'm sure Leslie would never forgive me if she knew I had made such a fool of myself. At least she would never trust me again, especially as I have lied like a gentleman to her and told her that I have never spoken real words of love to any other girl.

That isn't as great a falsehood as it looks on paper. I may have spoken the words that mean love, but I did not mean them, and the girl I

Women May Cut Gas Bills 25 To 50 Per Cent By Use Of Miss Denton's Ideas

Greatest Economy Is Obtainable At Kitchen Range By Avoiding Use Of More Fuel Than Necessary For Cooking

Washington — Now that your winter gas bills are coming down and you're stopped storming at the furnace, turn your attention to your cooking range.

It is there that you can save from 25 to 50 per cent on your gas bills—if you know how.

Miss Minna C. Denton of the bureau of home economies in the United States department of agriculture, can tell you. In fact, she experimented with four kinds of gas stoves, seven ovens and varying gas pressures until she developed 10 rules for the most economic use of the cooking fuel.

Follow them, says Miss Denton, and you will be surprised at the reduction in your gas bill next month.

USE OF BURNERS

Here they are:

- 1—Use the right burner. The biggest burner on your stove uses 50 per cent more gas than the others, and four or five times as much as the summer burner. Use the big burner for a dish with very large bottoms only. Use the summer burner, the smallest, to keep things boiling once they're started on the bigger jets.

- 2—Turn the burner down when the things have started to cook.
- 3—Keep the burners clean and the jets open.

- 4—Adjust the flame by moving the air shutter open or closed until the flame is blue, with a minimum yellow tip, and just touches the bottom of the pan. The blue flame is the hottest and makes the least soot.
- 5—Set the burner about one to one and one-half inches from the pan. Long flames use more gas than short ones for the same effect.

FIRELESS COOKERS

- 6—Use a fireless cooker properly. Heat the radiators just enough to keep the stew boiling. There's no economy if it takes as much gas to heat the cooker as it does to cook the food.
- 7—A pressure cooker will save money in cooking tough meats, vegetables and cereals.

- 8—The hooded fireless burner, made by many manufacturers, is a fuel saver.
- 9—See that the oven is tight and doesn't leak heat. Thick asbestos insulation about the oven walls will save heat.

- 10—Bake where possible at low temperature, or in a slow oven. It takes less to keep the oven going at low temperature. The difference in time between the "fast" and "slow" oven will not compensate for the difference in gas used.

Kansas City, Mo.—Mothers and fathers of Missouri will not let their children get ahead of them.

Modern education methods are producing a knowledge of the classics in music among the youngsters, such as the older generations never had.

To offset this advantage, Mrs. Joseph Rodas of Webster Grove, Mo., has started a movement to prevent parents from lagging behind their children in musical culture.

Miss Rodas is honorary president of the Missouri Federation of Music Clubs and in this capacity is organizing neighborhood music appreciation circles throughout the state.

LIKE SCHOOL.

The circles are composed of the parents of the boys and girls who are being taught in their schools to understand and appreciate grand opera and classical music.

The circles meet either monthly or weekly. Their members become familiar with all the famous opera selections by means of phonograph records.

The neighborhood circles exchange records and a musical circulating library thus is kept in operation.

TESTS HELD, TOO

Occasionally there is a quiz test with prizes for the members who recognize the largest number of selections.

"Nowadays," points out Miss Rodas, "the average school boy or girl can recognize instantly any grand opera selection upon hearing it played. While on the contrary his mother merely looks blank or says in a puzzled manner, 'I've heard that somewhere'."

"A great deal is being done now to teach music and to forsake jazz. But we also want to see that the parents keep step in this line so they will not be regarded as old fogies by their cultured children."

CIRCUS MEN UNITE TO BAN NAUGHTY DANCES

Chicago — Elimination of vice and gambling in the outdoor show business, sought in a campaign launched several weeks ago by organized showmen, already is being accomplished, according to an announcement by Thomas J. Johnson, general counsel of the organization and supreme dictator of the organized showmen, who has charge of the campaign.

Outdoor showmen, both members and non-members of the Showmen's Legislative Committee, the organization sponsoring the campaign, must comply with the moral standard set by the committee or be eliminated, Mr. Johnson declared.

The rapid increase of vice, gambling and other objectionable features in outdoor shows with in the last few years caused the showmen to receive a bad name throughout the country, said Johnson. Showmen, he added, saw that something must be done to save their business from complete annihilation by public disapproval and therefore the Showmen's Legislative Committee was organized.

Objectionable features of shows are barred in a platform decided upon by the committee. Some of these include Hawaiian dancers, gypsies, shows exclusively for men, all games where money is given as prizes or where prizes may be exchanged for money, and all immoral, indecent and suggestive acts.

OH, FOR INDIAN DAYS!

This "Indian princess" is Josephine Iva Rider, daughter of ex Senator T. C. Rider, Muskogee, Okla. She's been four years on the concert stage taking a leading role in the Indian opera "Natoma."

MORNING FROCK

Ratine-barred voile, tissue voile, linen and tissue gingham are used for the simple morning frock smart shops are showing for summer.

The model sketched is only slightly bloused at the waistline and its collar and short sleeves promise comfort for hot weather. The full length vest panel matches the long string belt. Collar and cuffs are white touched up with a line of colored cross-stitch embroidery.

TESTED RECIPES

BY BERTHA E. SHAPLEIGH

Sift one pint of flour, four teaspoons of baking powder, one-half teaspoon of salt and two teaspoons of sugar together. Cut into the flour four tablespoons of butter or three tablespoons of lard and moisten to a soft dough with about two-thirds of a cup of milk. Take onto a floured board and roll to one-half inch in thickness. Cut with a biscuit cutter, place in a buttered pan, and bake 15 minutes in a hot oven. Split butter and fill with strawberries sweetened and slightly mashed. Place on top a spoonful of beaten cream.

The dough may also be divided and baked in a round pan. Have both pieces baked in the same pan one being placed on the other, the lower piece well froed.

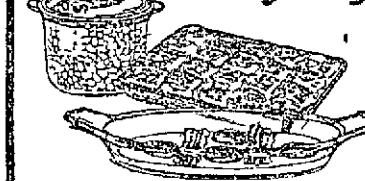

Shortcake is very good covered with crushed, sweetened strawberries, slightly warmed and served with plain cream.

OPEN CARD PARTY

Tonight at Pythian Moose Hall, Schaskopf, Skat and Five Hundred will be played. Refreshments served.

Make Bibs From Old Hand Towels

Many a woman who has cut down father's suits for sunny throws away other articles which could be cut down to similar advantage.

Linen goods are likely to wear through only in places, while other parts remain sound. The service of these good pieces may be prolonged if the original piece is remodeled into smaller articles. Big table cloths may be made into napkins and luncheon cloths; or, when sterilized by boiling, they may be cut into serviceable bandages. Old napkins may also be put to this use.

Hand towels make bibs for the children, and if a simple design is cross-stitched on them they look as good as new. Good wash cloths may be made from bath towels, if the edge is button-holed or blanket-stitched to keep it from raveling. If bath towels are too worn even for wash clothes they make good padding for holders. Large sheets may be converted into single sheets though a seam through the middle is sometimes necessary; or pillow cases offer another use. Sheet worn too thin for service make good slip covers over clothes. Pillow cases may be used for covers over waists. Old sheets and pillow cases are good on ironing boards, the pillow cases being better on sleeve boards. Little crib covers may be made from blankets. Cotton blankets make excellent pads for ironing boards and for a sliver on the dining table under the regular table cloth.

BASEBALL MOGULS SET STAGE FOR COMING SEASON

State League Owners Adopt Schedule, Name Umpires, New Secretary

George Hogriever Of Appleton Is Among Officials Selected—Noe, Oshkosh, Succeeds Calhoun As Scribe.

The stage is set. Final preliminaries, preparatory to the opening of the Wisconsin State Baseball league season were completed at the meeting of the directors of the league Monday night in the Conway hotel here. When the parley ended past midnight the league schedule, one of the biggest bones of contention was decided upon, umpires appointed and a few pre-season arguments among the moguls ironed out. The parley was the best attended so far with each of the clubs present, by one voting director in addition to a number of backers.

NAMES UMPIRES

Among the first matters taken up were the officials. President T. E. McGowan submitted a list of 15 candidates. His appointments which were approved by the directors include the following umpires: George Hogriever, Appleton; "Stony" McGowan, Manitowish; J. H. Coffey, Green Bay and Anton "Casey" Jensen, Little Chute. The games will be officiated by one man.

Schedule differences were more quickly overcome than it was expected. Appleton's opening date at Menasha, May 6 was left unchanged while the first home game by the Peewees will be on May 13 when Kaukauna will be the visiting team. The complete schedule will be submitted to the press on Wednesday by R. E. Noe, secretary of the league. Mr. Noe was appointed to act as the scribe of the organization and approved by the directors at the Monday night's parley. He succeeds George Calhoun, Green Bay, who is unable to continue the duties.

TO HAVE SATURDAY GAMES

Twenty-eight games will be played during the season, ending Sept. 23. Several Saturday and holiday games are included.

Appleton was represented at the parley by Walter Miller, Harry Erickson and Manager George Brautigam. Others from Appleton were David Smith, Walter Plaman, John Geris and George Kromer.

A. A. Juttner, president of the Menominee-Marquette Baseball team did the voting for the twin cities. He was accompanied by Jim Bresnahan, his playing manager, John Coppe, Kaukauna, represented the Edina City club, W. H. Harris, Fond du Lac, Fred Beebe, Oshkosh; Robert Lynch, Green Bay; W. H. Pierce, Menasha; William Liehl, Sheboygan. Treasurer Sensesbrenner took up official matters with the moguls.

CUBS WIN SIXTH GAME WITH ALEX DOING TWIRLING

St. Louis Drops Tilt, 7 To 3—Blades, Hornsby And Statz Make Homers

Chicago—Chicago pounded Fred Toney hard on Monday and won its sixth consecutive game, defeating St. Louis, 7 to 3. Alexander pitched in fine form during the early innings, but cased up after he had a safe lead. Blades and Hornsby hit home runs for the visitors and Statz made one for Chicago.

Batteries: Barfoot, Stuart, Toney and Clemons; Alexander and Hartnett. PIRATES ROB CINCI Cincinnati—Pittsburgh made it two straight from Cincinnati on Monday by bunting hits successfully and putting up a brilliant game in the field. Beeher was hit safely nine times and gave six bases on balls. He retired in the ninth inning in favor of Glazner. Remarkable fielding plays were made by Marquardt and Bigbee. Batteries: Glazner, Beeher and Coch; Rixey, Couch and Wingo.

GIANTS RALLY, WIN Brooklyn—After twenty-four runless innings, the Dodgers scored three runs in the sixth chapter on Monday, overcoming a two-run lead gained by the Giants by bunting three hits off Vance. The Dodgers lost the game, 4 to 3, however, when the Giants rallied in the ninth for two runs on four singles. The Dodgers had men on first and second with nobody out in the ninth, but a double play stopped them. Batteries: Fournier, Ryan, J. Barnes and Smith and Gaston; Vance and DeBerry.

Appleton Women Bowlers End Successful Season

The annual banquet of the Women's Club Bowling league Tuesday night in the Conway hotel will officially close bowling activities of Appleton women for the year.

The season was the most active in the history of the local women. Appleton quintets took part in the state tournament and some of the Paper City bowlers were members of quintets which shot in the national tourney in St. Louis.

At least 55 members of the Women's club participated in the rolling each week. Due to the large number of bowlers the league was divided into two sections, one attacking the pins on the Arcade alleys and the other on the Eagle floors.

Miss Sylvia Roubush led the pin smashing on the Arcade floors with an average of 131 pins for 45 games. The Blue Jay team copped first place, winning 35 games and losing 10. The Blue Jays also had the best team average of 1,820 pins.

Miss Laura Reinke ran away with the honors in the Eagles division, shooting 143 pins average for 39 games. The Tuttle Press and the Jolly Five quintets finished in a tie for first place, with 26 games won and 10 lost. The Jolly Five had the best team average of 1,625.

Following are the complete individual averages for the year:

Johnson Beats Fulton In Spectacular Battle; To Meet Willard Next

Floyd Scores Knockdown In First Round But Barely Escapes From Being Forced To Quit In Twelfth

New York—Floyd Johnson, Iowa heavyweight, earned the right to meet Jesse Willard in the Yankee stadium on May 12 as the result of his victory over Fred Fulton of Minnesota in their 12-round encounter in Jersey City Monday night. Johnson took ten out of the twelve rounds.

The fight, which was witnessed by 6,500 spectators, was one of the most spectacular heavyweight bouts in years. Johnson fought like a wild bull, rushing his opponent throughout the bout, relentlessly keeping on top of him and shooting rights and lefts at his jaw. It was only in this way that he knew he could hope to overcome the insurmountable advantage Fulton had over him in weight, height and reach. The Minnesota plasterer weighed in at 210 pounds and Johnson at 190.

Johnson won ten of the rounds by his ceaseless rushing and hammering, refusing to let up for a minute in his attack and never giving Fulton a breathing spell. Fulton clearly earned the eighth and twelfth. In the final round, the Minnesota came within an inch of knocking out the Iowa farmer. He stung Johnson with rights and lefts to the body and had him staggering and bleeding with his terrific punches to the face. Only the utmost courage and gameness enabled Johnson, to hold on and keep his balance.

JOHNSON ALMOST HELPLESS
Tired, bloody and arm weary, his feet staggering under him the Iowa heavyweight was almost helpless. Fulton, too, was in a weak state, panting with every effort and hardly able to keep his feet. It was his own condition as much as anything else that saved his opponent.

The crowd went wild for a moment as the final bell drew near. Fulton's supporters were begging for a knock out and escape from defeat. Johnson's hang on for another minute. The final clang of the bell found the two men clinched, slugging at close quarters with the least bit of strength left in the weary arms.

In the first round, Johnson caught Fulton off his balance in a neutral corner and amid a shower of rights and lefts to the plasterer's face, sent over a straight third sent Fulton to the canvas. Fulton got up without taking the count. It was a clean knockdown for Fulton was off his balance when the blow was struck. Johnson was on top of his man soon as he arose, and sent repeated rights and lefts to his jaw, continuing to hammer Fulton without a let up in the second round. In the third the Iowa staggered Fulton with rights and lefts to the face. In the fourth Fulton brought the blood, flowing from Johnson's mouth with a straight left. Fulton himself was bleeding from both mouth and nose from the first round on.

FULTON IN RETREAT
In the fifth round Johnson out-fought Fulton. The two mixed it continuously and the lighter man forced the other to the ropes by his relentless attack to the jaw. Fulton almost slipped out of the ring in the sixth round in retreating before the attacks.

Johnson staggered the plasterer with rights to the jaw in the seventh, crowding his man every inch of the way. In the eighth Fulton caught Johnson rushing in with a strong left to the body that slowed him up. The blow told on the lighter man. Fulton tried hard to get over knockout punch and several times just grazed the others' jaw. The Minnesota's own weariness and his anxiety to get over the punch spoiled his aim.

The last three rounds found both men tired and breathing hard. Johnson, in spite of the effect that his exertions cost him, continued to keep on top of Fulton in the ninth and staggered him with a right to the body that sent him to the ropes. The story was the same in the tenth and eleventh, with the Iowa having the better of it.

MOORE LOSES
Chicago—Paul Moore lost to Frankie Genaro, flyweight champion boxer by unintentionally delivering a foul blow in the sixth round.

NUSS WINS
Milwaukee—Johnny Nuss, DePere welterweight boxer, outpointed Steve Shoiniski, Milwaukee, in 15 rounds. Nuss floored the Milwaukee man in the second and third periods with blows to the jaw.

FOND DU LAC BIDS FOR BERTH IN AMATEUR WHEEL

Fond du Lac wants to join the Wisconsin amateur baseball league according to George "Stormy" Kromer, Appleton organizer.

Fond du Lac's application, is to be presented by G. F. Herman of the Dodge Brothers team at a meeting to be called by Mr. Kromer for Friday night in the Hotel Appleton.

At present, Appleton, Kaukauna, DePere, Oshkosh, Kimberly, and Menasha are members of the organization. Kromer plans to have a Green Bay team on the circuit, making it an eight club organization.

ZWICK AND SCHWEBS TO BATTLE IN FONDY

Two Outagamie-co glove tossers will make an effort to bring home the bacon Tuesday night as the result of their separate scheduled encounters in the ring in Fond du Lac. They are King Schwebs, Hortonville, who will meet Fred DeForest in four rounds and Phil Zwick, Kaukauna who is to battle a lad by the name of Cooney in another four round prelim. Opponents of the Outagamie-co lads are from Fond du Lac. Schwebs met and whipped Cooney and Young DeForest is expected to give him a harder battle. The showing of Zwick will be watched carefully as a matter of comparison. The main show of the Fondy card will be a ten round no decision contest between Bob Condit, of Canada and Jimmy Delaney, St. Paul.

PINDLE TO TACKLE GREEN BAY ARTIST

A 150 point three cushion billiard match has been arranged between Harold Pindle, Appleton, state amateur pocket billiard champ, and Harry Ensign, Green Bay billiardist and regarded as one of the best in Wisconsin. The contest will be played in three blocks of 50 each, the first on Thursday night at the Carr and Hansen billiard room. The second will be staged on the Ellis club tables in Green Bay. The player who will get the first 100 points will have the choice of tables for the final block.

A $50 prize will be offered to the winner.
